

CAN EAST ASIA COMPETE?

Innovation for Global Markets

---

SHAHID YUSUF
AND
SIMON J. EVENETT

THE WORLD BANK
Washington, D.C.

c

A copublication of the World Bank and
Oxford University Press

CONTENTS

Foreword	vii
Preface	ix
Abbreviations and Acronyms	xiii
1 East Asia Enters Round Two	1
A New Dynamic: Why and How	1
East Asian Development: Round Two	14
Notes	15
2 The National and Regional Development Context	17
Industrial Restructuring and the New Face of Policy	17
Context for Reform in East Asia	21
Notes	31
3 The Warp and Weft of Innovation	33
Role of the Business Environment	36
Clusters: The Spatial Dimension to Innovation	47
Local-Global Networking	55
Global Circulation of Knowledge and of Knowledge Workers	56
Research and Innovation by Firms: The Growing FDI Dimension	59
Logistics and Supply Chains	62
Conclusion	66
Notes	69

4	Financial and Business Services	73
	The Banking Sector: Crisis Avoidance, Macroeconomic Stability, and Growth	74
	Salience and Competitiveness of Business Services	89
	Future Role of Business Services	94
	Notes	96
5	ICT: Beyond the Hype	99
	What's at Stake?	99
	Making the Most of the Internet: The State's Role	117
	From Fixed-Line to Wireless Internet Access	124
	Wireless Infrastructure, Competition, and Policy	134
	Internet-Based Growth in East Asia	137
	Notes	138
6	Managing the Global Interface	143
	Reaping the Benefits of Open Trade and Investment Regimes	144
	Conclusion	166
	Notes	167
7	Innovating to Win	171
	Why Innovation Matters	172
	Can East Asia Retain Its Lead?	177
	What Should East Asia Do?	180
	Notes	182
	References	183
	Index	205