

A HISTORY OF THE VIETNAMESE

K. W. TAYLOR

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

CONTENTS

List of figures xii

List of tables xiii

List of maps xiv

Acknowledgements xvi

Introduction i

Prologue i

Vantage 2

Language 4

Apologia 6

Summary 9

Pronunciation and spelling of Vietnamese names 12

The provincial era 14

The empire comes south 14

The Han conquest 19

Shi Xie and the rise of the great families 24

Giao Province 29

Imperial weakness and local heroes 34

The Protectorate of An Nam 37

The Nan Zhao War 40

A lesser empire 44

The Ly dynasty 51

Hoa Lu 51

Ly Cong Uan 59

Ly Phat Ma 64

Ly Nhat Ton 72

Outbreak of the Ly-Song War 77

The Ly-Song War 83

Ly Can Due 86

Do Anh Vu and To Hien Thanh 92

Collapse of the Ly dynasty 99

The Tran dynasty 108

Tran Thu Do 108

Early Tran literati 114

Solidarity among the princes 117

Poetry and language 119

Mobilizing resources: eunuchs, slaves, dikes, and war 121

The First Mongol War 123

Living with danger 125

The Mongols return 131

Farewell to tattoos 137

Farewell to the princes 139

Tran Manh and the late Tran literati 144

Agrarian unrest, Tran Hao, and Nhat Le 150

Tran Phu rj4

Le Quy Ly 157

The Le dynasty 165

Destruction of the Tran aristocracy 165

vii I Contents

Ho Quy Ly	170
A historic watershed	174
Ming Giao Chi	177
The abandonment of Ming Giao Chi	180
Le Loi	183
A new dynastic structure	187
Great lords and Le Nguyen Long	192
Great lords and Le Bang Co	198
Le Tu Thanh as teacher	205
Le Tu Thanh as ruler	211
Expanding the borders	218
The beginning of inter-regional warfare
Return of adolescent kings and great lords	224
Rise of the east	232
The early Mac dynasty	237
Outbreak of the Seventy Years War	242
The Le restoration	249
The Fifty Years War 258
The north	258
The south	265
War begins	273
Dao Duy Tu and southern mobilization	279
Trinh mobilization	283
Christianity	287
Maritime trade	290
New leaders in an old war	295
The far south	300

viii I Contents

Nguyen Phuc Tan, Trinh Tac, and the Nghe An campaign	307
The last battle	312
The south and the north diverge	319
Relations with Cambodia	319
Politics and government in the south	325
Nguyen Phuc Khoat, the first southern king	331
Misgovernment in the north	339
Trinh Cuong's reforms	343
Trinh Giang and the collapse of government	351
Trinh Doanh and the age of rebellion	355
Another cycle of Trinh misgovernment	360
The Thirty Years War	365
The rise of Qui Nhon	365
Resurgence of the Nguyen Phuc and decline of the Trinh	370
Tay Son ascendancy and division	373
Nguyen Hue, the Quang Trung emperor	377
Nguyen Phuc Anh at Saigon	380
From Saigon to Dien Khanh	386
From Dien Khanh to Binh Dinh	390
A new peace	393
The Nguyen dynasty	398
Between north and south	398
Literature	403
Siam and the question of Khmer vassalage	409
Dynastic discipline	411
Relations with the Khmer vassal	413

Minh Mang's centralizing policies	415
Background to Le Van Khoi's rebellion	420
Le Van Khoi's rebellion and war with Siam	425
Thieu Tri and the French navy	429
Tu Due's accession and incapacity to rule	436
The threat from Europe	441
The French conquest	446
The Treaty of Saigon, 1862	446
Formation of French Cochinchina	451
The Treaty of 1874	454
Post-treaty disorder in the north	459
French administration in rural Cochinchina	461
Law and language in Cochinchina	464
The Sino-French War	468
The French take Hue	472
Formation of French Indochina	477
Franco-Vietnamese colonial relations	484
Intellectuals respond to the colonial regime	484
The 1908 disturbances and their sequel	490
Domestic ferment with Europe at war	493
The beginning of Saigon politics	497
Cochinchina and the new generation	500
The new generation in Tonkin and Annam	504
The soviets in Nghe-Tinh and western Cochinchina	509
The French resort to the monarchy	511
Vietnamese politics and the Popular Front	514
New cultural patterns	517

x I Contents

Indochina at war	524
The Japanese arrive	524
Formation of the Viet Minh	529
The August Revolution	532
Return of the French	536
Outbreak of a new war	540
A Franco-Vietnamese government	544
Radicalization of the Viet Minh	547
The beginning of United States involvement	551
The peace settlement	556
From two countries to one	561
Saigon	561
Hanoi	566
Start of a new war	572
Ngo Dinh Diem between communists and Americans	575
The Kennedy escalation	578
Assassination of Ngo Dinh Diem	583
Political turmoil in Saigon	590
Formation of the Second Republic of Vietnam	597
The communist offensive of 1968	601
US redeployment out of Vietnam	605
The Second Republic	607
The victory of Hanoi	611
The Sino-Khmer War and renovation	614
Retrospective	620

xi I Contents

Bibliographic essay 627

Materials in Asian languages 627

Suggested readings in English and French organized by chapters 630

Figures 644

Tables 649

Maps 654

Index 674