

Cross-cultural psychology: Research and applications

JOHN W. BERRY

*Queen's University
Kingston, Ontario, Canada*

YPE H. POORTINGA

*Tilburg University
Tilburg, The Netherlands*

MARSHALL H. SEGALL

Syracuse University Syracuse, New York, U.S.A.

PIERRE R. DASEN

*University of Geneva
Geneva, Switzerland*

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

---

Chapter 1	Introduction to cross-cultural psychology	1
	What is cross-cultural psychology?	1
	Goals of cross-cultural psychology	2
	Relationships with other disciplines	4
	Ethnocentrism in psychology	8
	A general framework for cross-cultural psychology	10
	Conclusions	14
Part I	Similarities and differences in behavior across cultures
Chapter 2	Cultural transmission and development	17
	Enculturation and socialization	17
	Child-rearing practices	20
	The concept of development	30
	Infant development	35
	Conclusions	41
Chapter 3	Social behavior	42
	Cultural context	43
	Conformity	46
	Values	50
	Individualism and collectivism	55
	Gender behavior	57
	Conclusions	68
Chapter 4	Personality	69
	Traits across cultures	70
	Affective meaning	77
	Expressive behaviors	81
	Indigenous personality	89
	Self and consciousness	93
	Conclusions	98
Chapter 5	Cognition	99
	The historical legacy	99
	Language and thought	101

	Contemporary issues	109
	General intelligence	116
	Genetic epistemology	118
	Specific abilities	121
	Cognitive styles	124
	Conclusions	130
Chapter 6	Perception	131
	Historical roots	131
	Sensory functions	133
	Color: coding and categorization	137
	Perception of patterns and pictures	145
	Aesthetics	156
	Conclusions	160
Part II	Pursuing problems across cultures: research strategies
Chapter 7	Cultural approaches	165
	Conceptions of culture	165
	Ethnography	170
	Culture and personality	179
	Cognitive anthropology	187
	Conclusions	188
Chapter 8	Biological approaches	192
	Evolution and adaptation	192
	Behavior genetics	200
	Ethology	205
	Biological models of cultural transmission	214
	Conclusions	218
Chapter 9	Methodological concerns	219
	Designing cross-cultural studies	220
	Psychological data in cultural context	228
	Analysis of comparability	236
	Classification of inferences	241
	Conclusions	245
Chapter 10	Theoretical issues in cross-cultural psychology	247
	Inferred antecedents of differences in behavior	247
	Relativism, absolutism, and universalism	256
	Culture as a psychological concept	260
	Conclusions	267
Part III	Applying research findings across cultures
Chapter 11	Acculturation and culture contact	271
	Acculturation	271

	Contact and participation	275
	Attitudes toward acculturation	276
	Behavior change	280
	Acculturative stress	284
	Conclusions	290
Chapter 12	Ethnic groups and minorities	292
	Plural societies	292
	Multiculturalism	296
	Ethnic relations	299
	Ethnic identity	303
	Language issues	305
	Education issues	308
	Conclusions	314
Chapter 13	Organizations and work	315
	Organizational structure	315
	Managerial behavior	323
	Work values and motives	331
	Conclusions	337
Chapter 14	Communication and training	339
	Intercultural communication	339
	Communication training	344
	International negotiations	347
	Conclusions	355
Chapter 15	Health behavior	356
	Psychopathologies across cultures	357
	Cultural factors in psychotherapy	364
	Cultural factors in health behavior	369
	Conclusions	377
Chapter 16	Psychology and the developing world	378
	Impact of Western psychology	379
	Indigenous psychologies	380
	Psychology and national development	384
	Conclusions	390
	Epilogue
	References	391
	Author index	440
	Subject index	451