Part I. Background	1
1. Introduction	3
A Statement of Intentions	3
Organizational Plan	5
2. Cybernetics, Information, and Control	11
Information	12
Levels of Information Classification of Input
Control	15
Negative Feedback Loop and TOTE Unit Organizations Among Feedback Loops Positive Feedback Loops Hierarchical Organization and Time Scales Section Summary
Applications to Living Systems	25
Homeostasis Adaptation-Level Theory Behavior Regulation
Information, Control, and Personality-Social Psychology	30
3. Focus of Attention, Inside and Outside the Laboratory	33
Defining Terms	34
Attention	34
Self-Focus and Environment Focus	35
Maintaining the Distinction
Varying Attention in Research	39
General Issues in Research Strategy	40
Experimental Manipulations and Individual Differences Experimental Manipulations: Their Nature and Timing
Manipulations of Self-Attention	43
Validation

Individual Differences in Self-Focus	45
Validation
Convergence of Manipulation and Disposition	49
Validity Private and Public Self-Awareness
Beyond the Laboratory	51
Naturalistic Variations in Attentional Focus	52
Attention to the Environment Attention to the Self
Conclusion	55
Part II. Information and the Use of Recognitory Schemas	57
4. Cognitive Theory: Schemas, Attributes, and Decision Biases	59
Models of Abstraction	61
Instance Theories Prototype Theories Frequency-Distribution Theories Section Summary Schemas and Prototypes
Abstraction: Some Additional Issues	67
A Hierarchy of Attribute Qualities Frames and Scripts
Decision Making	71
Biases in Decision Making Section Summary
5. Focus on the Environment: Perception of Places and Persons	77
Behavioral Settings and Environmental Taxonomies	77
Person Perception	80
Traits as Recognitory Schemas Determinants of Initial Category Placement Consequences of Initial Category Placement
Organization of Perception of Sequences	89
Segmenting of Behavior Units
Focus of Attention and Perception of the Environment	93
6. Focus on the Self: Perception of Self-Aspects	95
Trait Schemas and the Self	95
Self Schemas and Encoding Component Schemas and Degrees of Schematicity Conclusion
Access to Self Schemas	99
Self-Focus and Encoding by Self-Reference Self-Focus and Activation of the Self Schema Access and Attribution
Internal States: Emotions and Symptoms	104
Three Sources of Influence on Perceived Internal States Impact of Each Element on Subjective Experience Schemas and Symptom Distress Evoked Schemas and the By-Passing of Awareness
Chapter Summary	116

Part III. Attention and Motivation117

7. Standards of Behavior119

Standards 120
What is a Behavioral Standard? Categorization and the Specification of Behavior Section Summary

A Hierarchy of Standards 127
Levels of Behavioral Standards Conceptual Levels and the Physical Execution of Behavior Distinctions Within Levels Summary

Programs, Principles, and Consciousness 136
Effects of Attending to Well-Learned Behavior Closing Comment

8. Self-Focus and Feedback Loops143

Discrepancy Reduction 144

Theory 144
Duval and Wicklund's Theory

The Comparison of Present State Versus Standard 146
Self-Awareness and Information Seeking Self-Consciousness and Information Seeking Self-Consciousness and the Seeking of Diagnostic Information Self-Awareness and the Seeking of Diagnostic Information Conclusions and Boundary Condition

Behavioral Matching to Standard 151
Nonprovoked Aggression Responses to Erotica Children's Use of Standards Section Summary

Discrepancy Enlargement 157

Reactance 157
Self-Awareness and Reactance Self-Consciousness and Reactance Self-Attention, Reactance, and Feedback Loops

Negative Reference Groups 162
Self-Consciousness and Use of Negative Reference Groups Positive Feedback Loop

Social Comparison: A Theoretical Integration 165

9. Absence of Regulation, and Misregulation167

A Conceptual Distinction 167

The Absence of Regulation 169
Causes Deindividuation and the Absence of Regulation Remaining Issues Regarding Deindividuation Related Issues

Misregulation 179
Illustrations from Behavioral Medicine Illustrations from Social Behavior

Chapter Summary 182

Part IV. Interruption, Expectancy and the Reassertion–Withdrawal Decision	183
10. Theory: Interrupting the Feedback Loop, and the Role of Expectancy	185
Interruption of the System: An Example	185
Response to Interruption: Assessment of Outcome Expectancy	187
Bases of Expectancies	188
Prior Success and Failure Other Bases for Expectancies
Consequences of Expectancy Judgments	193
Behavioral Consequences , Relationship to Other Theories Affective Consequences of Expectancy Judgments
Chapter Summary	200
11. Research: Persistence and Task Performance	203
Early Research	203
Discrepancy and the Avoidance of Self-Focusing Stimuli Discrepancy and Selective Exposure to Self
Subsequent Research Concerning Outcome Expectancy	205
Avoidance and the Flexibility of the Discrepancy Self-Focus and Expectancies: Persistence and Withdrawal Self-Consciousness, Prior Outcomes, and Persistence Self-Esteem, Self-Attention, and Task Performance Self-Awareness, Relevance, and Persistence
Outcome Expectancy and Efficacy Expectancy	213
Links Between Cognition and Emotion in Achievement Attributions, Expectancy, and Achievement Behavior Prior Outcomes, Attribution, and Maze Performance
Chapter Summary	221
12. Research: Anxiety-Related Behavior	223
Self-Attention and Fear	223
Self-Awareness and Phobic Behavior Self-Consciousness, Standards, and Fear Expectancies, Fear, and the Approach–Withdrawal Decision Self-Attention and Test Anxiety Test Anxiety, Self-Focus, and Facilitation of Performance
Theoretical Comparisons	234
Theories of Test Anxiety Self-Efficacy
Chapter Summary	241

13. Additional Conceptual Issues: Achievement Motivation, Helplessness, and Egotism	243
Achievement Motivation	243
Atkinson's Formulation Relationship to Present Model
The Role of Causal Attributions Section Summary
Helplessness	251
Reassertion and Giving Up Attributions, Behavior, and Affect Section Summary
Egotism and Self-Esteem Maintenance	255
Control Theory and Self-Esteem Maintenance Egotism and Attribution Egotism and Helplessness Expectancies, Outcomes, and the Effect of Perceived Difficulty Conceptual Similarities Self-Esteem Protection: Public or Private? Section Summary
Chapter Summary	266
 Part V. Implications for Specific Problems in Social and Personality Psychology	267
 14. Relationship Between Self-Report and Behavior	269
Problems of Measurement	270
Levels of Specificity of Self-Report and Behavior Insufficient Sampling of Behavior Assessment of Behavioral Inconsistency
Conceptual Problems	272
Veridicality of Self-Reports The Role of Direct Experience in Attitude Formation Relevance of Attitudes as Behavioral Standards Self-Awareness and the Use of Evoked Attitudes
Types of Self-Report	284
 15. Social Facilitation	287
Drive Theory and Social Facilitation	287
Alternative Drive Theories
Control Theory and Social Facilitation	288
Comparisons Among Theories
Evidence Regarding Mediating States	291
Self-Focus and Comparison with Standards Drive
Palmar Sweat and Social Facilitation	293
Results and Discussion
Additional Questions	297
Social Interference Comparisons Among Manipulations Physiological Response Patterning

16. Private and Public Selves	307
Self-Completion, or Self-Presentation?	307
Impact on Research Areas
Self, or Selves?	309
Aspects of Self Implications
The Consciousness of Public Versus Private Self-Aspects	311
Public and Private Selves in a Compliance Setting Public and Private Selves and Reactions to Coercion The Public Expression of Privately Held Opinions Private and Public Self-Awareness Reinterpreting Other Research Section Summary
Self-Monitoring	322
Summary, Critique, and Integration
17. Cognitive Dissonance	327
Self-Attention and Dissonance	328
Public and Private Self-Aspects
Tests of the Public-Private Analysis	329
Self-Focus Manipulations and Dissonance Reduction Self-Consciousness and Dissonance Reduction
Relationship to Other Dissonance Research	334
Dissonance, or Impression Management?	337
Part VI. Conclusion	339
18. Afterword: Theory and Meta-Theory	341
Changes in the Learning Paradigm	341
Meta-Theoretical Issues	343
Reinforcement Control Theory
