

£

Educational Policy and National Character

Africa, Japan, the United States, and the Soviet Union

Dickson A. Mungazi

8

PRAEGER

Westport, Connecticut
London

Contents

Preface	xiii
Acknowledgments	xvii
Introduction	xix
1 Crisis in Education after the Second World War	1
The Setting	1
The Purpose of the Study	2
The Founding of the United Nations and Implications for a New Global Order	3
Rendezvous with the Past: Causes of the War	5
The Task of Defining New Objectives	10
The Consequences of a New Hope	14
The Williamsburg Conference: Making a Fresh Start	18
Summary and Conclusion	20
2 The Influence of History: The Importance of Knowledge of the Past	23
The Importance of History to Human Events	23
Africa: The Legacy of the Colonial Period	24
Japan: From the Meiji to the Occupation	29
The United States: The Jacksonian Era and the Beginnings of Modern Education	33
The Soviet Union: The Effect of the Bolshevik Revolution	36
Summary and Conclusion	42
3 Theoretical Considerations: The Basis of Effective Education	45
The Imperative of Theory	45

	The Need for a New Theoretical Perspective	47
	Africa: Seeking an Alternative Theoretical Base	49
	Japan: New Theoretical Perceptions	52
	The United States: The Search for a New Theoretical Approach	56
	The Soviet Union: Seeking a Theory for a Perfect Society	61
	Summary and Conclusion	66
4	Objectives: A Means of Constructing the Character of Education	67
	The Universality of Educational Objectives	67
	Africa: Educational Objectives as a Step toward Self-Discovery	69
	Japan: Seeking to Ensure the Development of the Next Generation	73
	The United States: Seeking to Resuscitate the Throb of the Nation	77
	The Soviet Union: Using Educational Objectives to Build a New Society	80
	Summary and Conclusion	86
5	The Curriculum: An Instrument of Fulfilling National Purpose	87
	The Universality of the Curriculum	87
	Africa: Seeking an End to the Agony of Underdevelopment	89
	Japan: Designing a Curriculum for the Age of New Technology	93
	The United States: Using the Curriculum to Win Victory for Humanity	96
	The Soviet Union: Using the Curriculum to Create a New Socialist Society	101
	Summary and Conclusion	105
6	Administration: The Vehicle of the Educational System	107
	Some Essential Factors of Administration	107
	Africa: The Legacy of the Colonial Administrative System	109
	Japan: Functions of a Monolithic Administrative Bureaucracy	114
	The United States: The Effect of the Three Administrative Dimensions	119
	The Soviet Union: New Elements of Administration under Glasnost and Perestroika	124
	Summary and Conclusion	127
7	Problems: Detractors from the Educational Process	129
	The Best of Times and the Worst of Times	129

Africa: Seeking Solutions through a Democratic Process	133
Japan: Problems of Education as Problems of Society	139
The United States: Problems of Education and Social Responsibility	142
The Soviet Union: Seeking Solutions to Problems of History	147
Summary and Conclusion	150
8 Educational Policy and National Character: Summary, Conclusions, and Implications	153
The Purpose of the Study in Perspective	153
Africa: Seeking Solutions to the Conflict between the Past, the Present, and the Future	155
Japan: Using Education to End Conflict of Values	160
The United States: Facing an Educational System in Crisis	166
The Soviet Union: Efforts to Eliminate the Agony of a Dysfunctional System	172
Implications	180
Selected Bibliography	185
Name Index	201
Subject Index	205