

Comrades, Clients and Cousins

Colonialism, Socialism and Democratization in São Tomé and Príncipe

by

Gerhard Seibert

BRILL
LEIDEN • BOSTON
2006

CONTENTS

List of plates and figures	xi
Abbreviations	xiii
Preface	xvii
Introduction	1
The objective	1
Caribbean contours in an African environment	4
Historic background	7
The theoretical and political context	8
Relevant concepts	12
Local patterns of multiparty politics	15
The chapters	17
Research methods and sources	18
Chapter One
Formation and Recolonization of an African Creole Society	21
Introduction	21
The formation of the creole society	21
Settlement and slavery	23
The sugar plantations	25
External threat and economic decline	29
The Catholic mission	31
Institutional and political conflicts	32
Slave revolts and escape	35
The creolization process	37
The second colonization	39
The rise and fall of cocoa	44
From slave to serviçal	46
The recolonization of the church	48
The indentured labour system	50
External and internal responses to the labour system	51
The forros ' aversion to field labour	54
The stratification system	56
Conclusions	58

Chapter Two

From the Origins of Forno Nationalism to Independence	59
Introduction	59
Political activities in the early 20th century	60
The Massacre of February 1953	65
The causes of the massacre and the number of victims ...	85
São Tomé's few nationalists: exiled, dispersed and fragmented	88
The decolonization process	100
Conclusions	116

Chapter Three

The Socialist One-Party Regime	121
Introduction	121
The construction of the socialist state	121
The establishment of the security apparatus	127
The administrative system and the party structure	129
Social and education policies	131
The foreign policy options	133
The constitutional framework	136
The competition for power	139
Alleged coups and invasion threats	142
The census riots and Trovoada's imprisonment	145
Pinto da Costa's autocracy	150
The emergence of the exile opposition	154
The performance of the state-owned economy	156
The plantation economy	159
The structure of the state-owned plantations	161
The failed diversification of the economy	169
The party's ideological trajectory	173
Conclusions	178

Chapter Four

Political Transition and Economic Reform	183
Introduction	183
Initial political change	183
Political instability and invasion	188
The economic liberalization	191
Corruption scandals	196

The renovation of the state party	199
The transition process	207
The emergence of political parties	212
The democratic elections	219
Cocoa rehabilitation under structural adjustment	224
Conclusions	229

Chapter Five

Governance, Conflict and Public Property under the

Democratic System	231
Introduction	231
End of a tactical alliance	232
Continuous conflict and final break	239
The MLSTP returns to power	254
The military coup	257
The background	259
The course of the events	266
The aftermath of the coup	269
Continuous political instability	271
The initial anti-corruption drive	283
Increasing transparency and corruption scandals	286
The importance of external funds	289
The routine of corruption	293
The impunity of corruption	297
Factors in favour of corruption	299
Conclusions	303

Chapter Six

Structural Adjustment and Economic Performance Under

Democratic Rule	307
Introduction	307
The difficult relationship with the Bretton Woods institutions	309
Overambitious goals and poor performance	316
Administrative reform	326
The financial sector reform	333
The privatization of agriculture	339
Manufacture and services	355
The emergence of the oil sector	368

Controversial oil licensing rounds	382
Unmanageable debts and inefficient foreign assistance	392
Conclusions	395
 Chapter Seven
Political Pluralism and Competitive Elections	399
Introduction	399
The local elections of December 1992	400
The early legislative elections of October 1994	402
PCD pôs o país de pé (PCD has put the country on its feet)	405
Acreditar em S. Tomé e Príncipe (Believing in São Tomé and Príncipe)	411
The local patron as candidate	415
Renovar a mudança (Renew the change)	420
O partido que fala a verdade (The party that tells the truth)	423
Voto de confiança (Vote of confidence)	426
Election results	427
Legislative elections in 1998 and 2002	430
Multipartyism: characteristics and conditions	432
Conclusions	442
 Chapter Eight
Party Trajectories and Presidential Elections	445
Introduction	445
The political parties: MLSTP/PSD	445
The parties of political change: PCD-GR and ADI	449
The three small parties: CODO, FDC and AP	457
The 1996 presidential elections: the prelude	462
The first round	469
The voting and the aftermath	479
The final ballot	484
The 2001 presidential elections	492
Conclusions	494
 Chapter Nine
Local Dimensions of Politics: Kinship, Rumours and Pamphlets	497
Introduction	497

The impact of kinship	498
Kinship and conjugal unions types	500
The current customary union	507
The visiting union	508
Patterns of polygyny	510
Women and mothers	512
Family life in an urban neighbourhood	517
Kinship and politics	522
Rumours and anonymous pamphlets	526
The characteristics of rumours	528
Rumours and Rádío BB	530
Anonymous pamphlets	535
Conclusions	541
Conclusions	543
Bibliography	557
Appendices
Appendix 1 Presidents and government ministers	575
Appendix 2 Executive committees of liberation movements and parties	589
Appendix 3 Election Results	595
Appendix 4 Basic Economic Data 1988–2004	601
Index	603