

TOWARD A LITERATE WORLD

*Television in Literacy Education—
Lessons from the Arab Region*

EDWARD L. PALMER

Westview Press
BOULDER • SAN FRANCISCO • OXFORD

CONTENTS

Foreword	ix
Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction	1
1 Why a Television Series on Language and Reading for the Arab Countries?	7
Learning to Read Arabic, 7
Education in the Arab Countries, 13
2 Issues in Educational Applications of Television	17
Availability of Television in the Arab Region, 17
Negotiating the Audience Definition and Production Approach, 21
3 Lessons from Past Experience	25
Iftah Ya Simsim , 25
The Electric Company , 26
How Al Manaahil Differs from Its Precursors, 27
The Children's Television Workshop Model, 29
4 Managing the Project	35
The Beginnings, 35
Needs and Resources of Participating Entities, 37
Management Structure and Staff, 41
Problems and Adjustments, 42
The Full-Series Production Stage, 50

5	Setting Al Manaahil's Educational Goals and Approach	53
	The Curriculum-Planning Process, 53
	Overview of the Curriculum Statement, 56
6	Bringing It All Together: The Shows	59
	Format Development: Initial Stage, 59
	Desired Format Qualities, 60
	Blueprinting the Shows, 62
	Production Reports on Major Segment Types, 71
	Description of a Half-Hour Show, 79
7	Midcourse Corrections in Presentation	87
	The CTW Producers' Evaluation of the Five Test Shows, 87
	The Formative Evaluation, 89
	The Advisory Committee Review of the Five Test Shows, 95
8	Early Reactions to the Series	99
	The Interview Results: Framework and Overview, 100
	Selected Interview Excerpts, 103
	The Transfer of Technology, 113
9	The Summative Evaluation	117
	Background, Scope, and Methods, 117
	The Results, 119
10	Implications for Educational Television Worldwide	121
	Al Manaahil's Broad Implications, 121
	Al Manaahil's Future in the Arab Region, 123
	The Need for Better-Informed Policymaking, 125
	Appendix A: A Brief History of The Electric Company and Its Effects	133
	Appendix B: Statement of Al Manaahil's Goals and Objectives	139
	Appendix C: The Producers' Evaluation of the Five Test Shows	153
	References and Bibliography	161
	About the Book and Author	165
	Index	167