

AFRICAN WORKERS AND COLONIAL RACISM

*Mozambican Strategies and Struggles in Lourenço Marques,
1877–1962*

Jeanne Marie Penvenne

HEINEMANN
Portsmouth, NH

WITWATERSRAND
UNIVERSITY PRESS
Johannesburg

JAMES CURREY
London

CONTENTS

Preface	xiii
Glossary	xv
Currency Note	xvii
Introduction	1
Work: Images and Meaning	1
Labor Policy and Practice	3
An African Working Class	5
Individuals, Structures and Groups	7
Voices and Historians	9
1 Context and Chronology: The Metropole, the Hinterland and the Region	16
Chronology—The Metropole	16
The Hinterland Textures	20
The Regional Textures—Wenela Without/ Shibalo Within	24
Shibalo —Implanting the System	26
2 Creating a White Man's Town: Xilunguine, Lourenço Marques, Delagoa Bay	28
The Contenders and the Stakes	29
Xilunguine, Lourenço Marques and Delagoa Bay	31
Sculpting the City's Main Lines	33
Shaping the City's Characteristic Textures	40
3 "Work for the White People, You Will be Able to Get Money"—African
Perspectives on Changing Labor Relations	44
Worker Strategies and Attitudes	45
The Best Laid Plans	47
Tilling the Night Soil	51
"Well Served"—Domestic Service in the Urban Context	54
"Well Served"—Relationships in Black and White	57
4 The Components and Costs of Inequality	62
Prelude to the Indigenato	62
Sorting out the "Natives"—Differentiation and Solidarity	63

The Assimilation Morass	64
The Indigenato : Getting Nothing for Something	69
The Discourse of Inequality	72
5 Port Labor Struggles to 1933	78
The Extension of State Control at the Port Complex	78
Labor Organization in Black and White	82
The Rise and Fall of Labor Action at the Port Complex	83
The Depression and the End of an Era	89
6 The New State—"For the Good of the Nation" 1926 to 1962	91
Crisis in African Urban Leadership	92
Layered Crises—The Region, the Hinterland, and the City	95
Economy, Immigration, and Entrenched White Advantage	97
Postwar Expansion and Contradictions	100
7 Tailoring Labor Control in the Postwar Economy Contrasting Perspectives	103
Indigenato , Carrots, Sticks, and Fences	104
Registration—Curbing the Majority	105
Palmatória—Breaking the Recalcitrant	108
Fences—Blocking the Upwardly Mobile	109
Negotiating the Indigenato	111
Samuel Chipoco Muianga	113
Tailoring Labor Control to the Postwar Era	114
8 A Hierarchy of Struggles in the Port Sector—1933–1962	117
Moving More for Less—The Burgeoning Waterfront	118
Overtime Strategies—Casual Labor Binges	121
Confrontation—Manual Labor from the Bottom to the Top	123
Ducking the System	125
Pride and Prejudice—Struggles in the Offices	125
Chibindji's Courtship	127
Tembe's Pride	128
9 Accommodation, Mobility, and Survival Public Sector Labor, 1933–1962	131
Municipal Labor in the Urban Context	131
Networks and Security in the Middle Ranks	132
Exploitation and "Respect" in the Bottom Ranks	135
Municipal Shibalo : The Case of Santos Gil	136
10 Accommodation and Mobility—Strategies in the Private Sector Domestic Service, 1933–1962	141
Domestic Service in the Municipal Context	142
Domestic Disobedience, Immorality, and Disorder	146
Toward Feminization	148
Domestic Service and Male Youths	150
Conclusion	152

Contents

xi

Conclusion: African Workers and Colonial Racism— Images, Groups, and Individuals	154
Sources and Bibliography	192
Annex I: Oral Interview Material	205
Annex II: Mozambican Work Songs	209
Index	217