

JOHN CLEVERLEY

The Schooling of China

中國培訓人材之道路

Tradition and modernity in Chinese education

George Allen & Unwin
Sydney London Boston

Contents

Table of dynasties	viii
Illustrations	ix
Abbreviations	x
Preface	xi
1 Education for a World of Great Harmony	1
The golden age of Chinese education/Confucius, sage and teacher/Revisions and rivals/Society, science and Confucianism/Leadership and classical learning in modern times
2 Schools in ancient China	15
Selection of the fittest/ Examinations on balance/Schools of the past/On teachers and pupils/Schooling for girls
3 Founding modern education	29
Learning religion and Western ways/Self strengthening/ The Hundred Days/National education under the Qing/ Extending the system/Republican redirections/Education and the warlords/Education for women
4 Education under the Republic	49
Looking to progressive education/Progress of mission education/Consolidation by the Kuomintang/New prescriptions/Advice from the League of Nations/ Politics and policies/Compulsory and social education under the KMT/Leadership in social education/Schools at war/ KMT education in wartime/Civil war and schooling

5 Mao Zedong and education	70
Bending the twig/Post-primary education/Influences from teachers' college/Extracurricular activities/Last days at college/ The path to Marxism/Understanding Marx/ Educational thought and Marxism/Teaching and organising/Training party workers
6 Origins of communist schooling	92
Communist education before liberation — Jiangxi/Education, the army and the masses/The Yan'an experience/Cadre training in Yan'an/Yan'an and youth/Intellectuals and the mass line/ The Yan'an model of education
7 Post-liberation schooling	112
The first adjustments/Introducing a socialist system/ Nationalising religious schools/The quest for literacy/Social and cultural education/Re-evaluating history/ Intellectuals and the CPC
8 Russian influence and the aftermath	127
Learning from the Russians/Soviet influence in middle and primary schools/The break/Aftermath
9 'The struggle between two lines'	141
The communist wind/The school and productive work/ Setbacks and consolidation/Central authority reasserted/The return of Mao/Cult of the personality/'Contradictions'/ Reactions from the Ministry of Education
10 Cultural Revolution	162
Early manifestations/Legitimacy/Education in turmoil/ The great liaison/Second thoughts/The re-education of teachers/Rural deployment/Outcomes of the Cultural Revolution
11 'Socialist new-born things'	180
Return to school/Self reliance/Controlling the schools/ Admission procedures and courses/Shortening the curriculum/ Politics and schooling/Curriculum change in schools and universities/Productive labour and school work/The integration of theory and practice/Teaching methods and examinations/ The PLA and the schools

12 Revision or revisionism?	200
Teachers and reform/Opponents from within/Counterattack/ July 21 workers' universities/Making the dead serve the living/ The Great Education Debate
13 'Everything changes and remains as before'	215
Reacting against the 'Gang of Four'/Separating friends from enemies/Rehabilitating individuals/The restoration of examinations/Respect the teacher, love the student/ Education and economic planning
14 Anatomy of the Chinese school system	232
Middle school/Special education/Tertiary education/ Training teachers/Pre-schools/Adult education/Education of the minorities/On leadership and funding
15 Problems and prospects for Chinese education	254
Education and industrial modernisation/Education and rural reconstruction/Population size and education/ Finding more money for schools/'Seek truth from facts'/ Opening and closing doors/The faith of the young/Stiffening morale/Taking stock/The wind from the south
Sources	278
Index	305