
JEWISH AND ISLAMIC PHILOSOPHY

Crosspollinations in the Classic Age

LENN E. GOODMAN

Rutgers University Press
New Brunswick, New Jersey

Contents

Preface	vii
Abbreviations and short titles	xv
1 Crosspollinations	1
1. Hearing God's voice in words	3
2. "He who knows himself knows his Lord"	15
3. God's act in history	24
2 Rāzī and Epicurus	35
1. Perception and sensation	36
2. Pleasure and pain	38
3. Desire, motivation, and free will	40
4. Rāzī's Ethics and the ethical transparency of hedonism	43
3 Baḥyā and Kant	68
1. The antinomy	68
2. Baḥyā's response	70
3. The philosophical impact of Baḥyā's approach	78
4 Maimonides and the Philosophers of Islam	89
1. Creation	92
2. Theophany	102
5 Friendship	119
1. Friendship as reciprocated virtue	119
2. Biblical, Rabbinic, Maimonidean and Qur'anic fellowship	126
3. Miskawayh on friendship	131
4. Friendship in al-Ghazālī	134

6	Determinism and freedom in Spinoza, Maimonides and Aristotle	146
1.	Aristotle's determinism	147
2.	Maimonides' determinism	150
3.	Spinoza's determinism	153
4.	Spinoza's defence of human freedom	156
5.	Maimonides on character and freedom	178
6.	Freedom and akrasia	184
7.	Conclusion	193
7	Ibn Khaldūn and Thucydides	201
1.	A science of history and civilisation	201
2.	Governance in history	219
	Bibliography	240
	Index	245