

THE PRACTICAL IMAGINATION
The German Sciences of State in the Nineteenth Century

DAVID F. LINDENFELD

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS
Chicago and London

Contents

List of Tables and Figures vii

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: A Theoretical Framework 1

ONE The Seventeenth- and Eighteenth-Century

Background: Classification 11

The Background of Cameralism 11; Cameral Science Defined 14; Statistics and State Law 20; The Expansion of Cameralism after 1750 22; The Cameralist System and Natural History 28; Cameralism and the Sciences of State 33

TWO The French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Era,
1789–1815: Assimilation 46

German Responses to the Revolution 46

Bildung and the Critique of the Mechanical Metaphor of the State 46; The Bureaucratic Counteroffensive in Bavaria and Prussia 51

The Assimilation of Kant and Smith 55; The Napoleonic Period 67; Shifts within the Field 74

Finance 74; The Sciences of Trades: Agriculture, Forestry, Technology, and Commerce 76; Police Science 81; Statistics 84; German Theoretical Economics 85

THREE The Sciences of State at Their Height,
1815–1840: Deliberation 89

The “Entire Sciences of State” and Their Institutional Background 89

South Germany and Saxony 94; The Fragmentation of the Sciences of State in North Germany 101

The Shape of the Field 111

State Law and Politics 111; Cameralism Transformed: Continuity and Discontinuity in Economics 118; Police Science 125; Finance and Monetary Policy 130; Statistics 131; Cross-Fertilizations: Agriculture, Economics, and History 133

The Effectiveness of the Sciences of State in Economic and Social Policy 139

FOUR A Period of Transition, 1840–1866: Variation 142

The 1840s 143

Bureaucracy and the Social Question 143; The Concern with Stages of Economic Growth 151

1848 and After: Institutions and Actors 157; Themes and Variations 175

Organicism 176; Society 180; Historical Method 185

Applications 186

Economic Theory, Economic Politics, and Finance 186; Statistics 193;Politics, Polizei, and State Law 197

FIVE A Truncated Revival, 1866–1890: Organized

Research and Charisma 205

Unification, the Training of Administrators, and the Universities 208;

The Leading Personalities: Schmoller, Brentano, and Wagner 217; The Vereinfür Sozialpolitik 223; The Economic Sciences of State 233*The Historical School* 233; Statistics 239; Wagner and Social Economy 243; Menger and theAustrian School 245; The Methodenstreit 252

The Juristic Sciences of State: State Law and Administrative Law 256;

Conclusion 260

SIX The Wilhelminian Era, 1890–1914:

Specialization and Clarification 264

The Kathedersozialisten and Public Opinion 265; Structural and Generational

Changes in the Academic Environment 281; Specialization 286;

Interdisciplinary Trends: Sociology, History, Anthropology 296; The Juristic

Sciences of State 304; The Revival of Economic Theory after 1900 309; The

Problematic Relation of Theory to Practice 315

Epilogue 323

Appendix: The Data from University Catalogues 331

Abbreviations 335

Bibliography 337

Index 371