Microteaching in Teacher Education & Training

Brian McGarvey and Derek Swallow

CROOM HELM
London • Sydney • Dover, New Hampshire

CONTENTS

1. MICROTEACHING 1

Early developments 1
Trends in practice and rationale 5
Microteachihg at the New University of Ulster 21

2. EXPLORATORY INVESTIGATIONS 28

An observation study of microlessons 28
Observing microteaching review conferences 35
Studying student-tutor interpersonal relationships 44
Studying students' self-concept as teacher 47
Conclusions 49

3. A REVIEW OF SUPERVISION IN TEACHER EDUCATION 50

The supervision of teachers in schools 50
The supervision of microteaching 54

4. A CASE STUDY OF MICROTEACHING 59

The aims of the microteaching supervisors 59
Design of the case study 70

5. DESCRIPTIONS OF MICROTEACHING SUPERVISION 78

Cluster analysis 80
A comparison of approaches 83
Conclusions 89

6. TUTOR-STUDENT INTERPERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS 92

Interaction style and affective meaning 93
Perceptions of interpersonal relationships 94
Excerpts from the review conferences 102
Conclusions 114

7. HOW STUDENTS LEARN IN MICROTEACHING 117

Lesson-experience self-confrontation and the focus of review conference discussions 120
The quality of the students' lesson-experience self-confrontation 121
Conclusions 130

8. MODELS OF MICROTEACHING 133

Models of teaching and teacher preparation 134
The origins of tutors' models of microteaching 141
Conclusions 148

9. MICROTEACHING: CONSTRUCTS, PROCESSES AND RATIONALE 149

Recent developments in microteaching rationale 149
Understanding microteaching 153
Microteaching: constructs, rationale and theory 160

APPENDICES 168

BIBLIOGRAPHY 187

INDEX 201