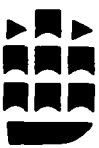
Process and Experience in the Language Classroom

Michael Legutke and Howard Thomas



London and New York

Contents

General Editor's Preface

Acknowledgements

1 The modern language classroom: the case of the outmoded paradigm 1
1.1 The challenge of Communicative Language Teaching (CLT): shifts of paradigms 1
1.2 CLT: a 'glimpse' at classroom reality 5
1.3 CLT: missing links 10

2 Theme-centred interaction in the L2 classroom 13
2.1 The 'culture' of the L2 classroom 13
2.2 The interaction potential of the L2 classroom 15
2.2.1 Content and process materials in classroom interaction 15
2.2.2 The learner and the teacher in the interactive process 18
2.2.3 The thematic dimension: theme and topic 22
2.2.4 Domains of communication 27
2.3 The 'dynamic balance' in theme-centred interaction 30

3 From 'Humanism' into the classroom: critical criteria 33
3.1 Classroom activities: towards a definition 33
3.2 Humanistic language teaching 35
3.3 Humanism and education: a brief historical perspective 40
3.3.1 Humanistic psychology and the climate of change 40
3.3.2 Key concepts of Gestalt Therapy 42
3.3.3 Learning in Gestalt and techniques for classroom application 42
3.3.4 Conclusion 47
3.4 Critical criteria 48
3.4.1 Criterion 1: Context and topicality 49
3.4.2 Criterion 2: Awareness 50

3.4.3 Criterion 3: Prior knowledge and prerequisites for learning 53
3.4.4 Criterion 4: Self-determination and selective authenticity 54
3.4.5 Criterion 5: Motivation – resistance 58
3.4.6 Criterion 6: Language: learner needs and discoursal outcomes 61
3.4.7 Criterion 7: Process relevance 63
3.5 The two premises: clarity and trust 64

4 Building bricks: communicative learning tasks 71
4.1 Task-based language learning and exercise typologies 71
4.2 Communicative learning tasks 75
4.2.1 Trust-building activities and relaxation exercises 75
4.2.2 Awareness and sensibility training 85
4.2.3 Information-sharing activities 95
4.2.4 Thinking strategies and problem-solving 100
4.2.5 Imagination-gap, fantasy and creative expression 105
4.2.6 Role-playing and creative dramatics 120
4.2.7 Interaction and interpersonality 130
4.2.8 Values clarification and discussion activities 133
4.2.9 Process evaluation and learner training 142
4.3 Towards the open classroom: benefits and limits of communicative tasks 150

5 Learning in projects (overview) 157
5.1 Background: towards a definition 157
5.2 Projects in foreign language learning 160
5.2.1 Encounter projects 161
5.2.2 Text projects 164
5.2.3 Class correspondence projects 165
5.3 Nature of a project 166
5.3.1 The organizing principle 166
5.3.2 Stages of a project 169
Appendices: Project scenarios 181
Appendix 1: General structure for project work 182
Appendix 2: Scenario 1: Jumble Aid 181
Appendix 3: Scenario 2: The Catcher in the Rye 194

6 Issues in project learning 202
6.1 Process 202
6.2 Product 204
6.3 Experience 214
6.3.1 Learning in the here and now 215
6.3.2 Experimentation and reflection 217
6.4 The cooperative classroom 219
6.5 The individual in the group 230
6.6 Aspects of implementation 236
6.6.1 Topic and content 236
6.6.2 Long-term planning and the sequencing of projects 240
6.6.3 The role of automatization 242
6.6.4 Evaluation and assessment 243
6.7 The institution 254
6.7.1 The location 254
6.7.2 Institutional adjustments 256

7 Learner education 259
7.1 Broadening the concept: process competence of language learners 259
7.2 Components of process competence 265
7.3 Learner education and learner training 267
7.3.1 Experiences – expectations – beliefs: what the learner brings to the classroom 267
7.3.2 Personal growth and interpersonality 268
7.3.3 Learner autonomy 270
7.3.4 Text production 274
7.3.5 Peer teaching: learning through teaching 276
7.3.6 Learner education – an integrated approach 279

8 Teacher education 286
8.1 Teachers and the experiential classroom 286
8.2 Teacher roles 287
8.2.1 The general role of the teacher as coordinator and facilitator 287
8.2.2 The teacher as manager and organizer 289
8.2.3 The teacher as instructor 295
8.2.4 The teacher as investigator and researcher 303
8.3 Teacher education for the process-oriented classroom 304
8.3.1 Pre-service teacher education 304

8.3.2 Initiatives in in-service teacher education 305
8.3.3 Teacher education: a final statement 308

Bibliography 309

Index 325