

Organization of Innovation East-West Perspectives

Editors: John Child • Paul Bate

W
DE
G

Walter de Gruyter • Berlin • New York 1987

Contents

Acknowledgements . . . . .	V
----------------------------	---

Introduction

Capitalist-Socialist Dialogue on Organizational Behaviour

Oiva Laaksonen

1. Why a Dialogue is Needed . . . . .	1
2. Organizational Behaviour: Problems of a Dialogue . . . . .	1
3. Barriers to a Positive Dialogue . . . . .	5
4. What the Different Parties can Gain from a Dialogue . . . . .	8
5. Common Problems Caused by Using the Opportunities Arising from Environment . . . . .	8
6. Threats Arising from Environment . . . . .	10
Common, Uniting Threats . . . . .	10
Threats Arising from Contradictions . . . . .	10
7. Threats Arising from Power Competition between the two Camps . . . . .	12
8. Interest in Creating a Dialogue is Increasing . . . . .	13

Part I. Perspectives

1. Paradigms and Understandings in Comparative Organizational Research

Paul Bate and John Child

1.1 The Paradigm of Capitalist and Socialist Organization . . . . .	19
1.1.1 The Ideological Basis for Organization . . . . .	20
1.1.2 Fundamental Organizational Objectives and Relationships . . . . .	22
1.1.3 Organizational Hierarchies . . . . .	23
1.1.4 Planning, Resource Allocation, and Control . . . . .	24
1.2 Limitations to the Capitalist-Socialist Paradigm . . . . .	25
1.3 Paradigms and Understandings . . . . .	32
1.4 Organizations in Transition: Concluding and Introductory Remarks . . . . .	37
1.4.1 Sources of Pressure for Change . . . . .	37
1.4.2 Rationales for Change . . . . .	39
1.4.3 The Authors of Change . . . . .	40
1.4.4 Resistances to Change . . . . .	41
1.4.5 Structures for Change . . . . .	42
1.4.6 Processes and Models of Change . . . . .	43

2. Towards Socialist-Capitalist Comparisons of the Organizational Problem

Stephen Wood

2.1 The Nature of Comparative Work and the West's Move to Socialist Countries. . . . .	52
2.2 Fudging the Organizational Problem. . . . .	56
2.3 Japan and Managerial Competence. . . . .	59
2.4 Socialist/Capitalist Research Collaboration. . . . .	61
2.4.1 Re-appraising Taylorism. . . . .	62
2.4.2 Technology and Managerial Innovations. . . . .	63
2.4.3 Culture. . . . .	64
2.4.4 Managerial Competence. . . . .	65
2.5 Conclusions. . . . .	66

3. Four Structural Problems of the Modern Enterprise: Similarities and Differences in Capitalist and Socialist Countries

Cdtlin Zamfir

3.1 The Problem of Authority. . . . .	73
3.2 The Problems of Performance Motivation. . . . .	78
3.2.1 Restrictions. . . . .	78
3.2.2 New Possibilities. . . . .	79
3.3 Individual Orientation: Utilitarian Versus Expressive. . . . .	79
3.4 Enterprise Orientation: Economic Profit Versus Collective Well-Being. . . . .	81

4. Information Technology and Organizational Choice

Jorg Sydow

4.1 Introduction. . . . .	85
4.2 Practical and Theoretical Interests in the Scope of Organizational Choice. . . . .	86
4.3 Defining Determinism and Choice and Their Interaction. . . . .	88
4.4 The Technological Aspect: The Allegedly Less Deterministic Character of Information Technology. . . . .	90
4.5 The Economic Aspect: Economic Constraints in Capitalist and Socialist Societies. . . . .	94
4.6 Summary. . . . .	98

Part II. Innovation and the Organization

5. Strategic Management of Innovation in Large Czechoslovak Firms

Leo Voddeck

5.1 Introduction. . . . .	103
5.2 Innovation Policy in the Context of Strategic Management . . . . .	103
5.3 Problems of Innovation Management in Large Czechoslovak Firms	106
5.4 Conclusion. . . . .	110

6. Attitudes and Motivation of Production Managers in the Management of Technological Innovation

Christo Domozetov

- 6.1 Attitudes Characterized by the Initiating and Carrying Through of Technological Innovation . . . . . 114
- 6.2 Attitudes of Preparedness to Assist in Technological Innovation . . 116
- 6.3 The Attitude of Passivity with Respect to Technological Innovation 117
- 6.4 Attitudes of Opposition to Technological Innovation. . . . . 119

7. New Technology and New Supervisory Roles in U.K. Manufacturing Industry

Sheila Rothwell

- 7.1 Research . . . . . 123
- 7.2 Role Definition . . . . . 124
- 7.3 Supervisory Training and Development. . . . . 126
- 7.4 Job Knowledge and Skills. . . . . 127
- 7.5 Job Security. . . . . 129
- 7.6 Leadership and Motivation. . . . . 130
- 7.7 Relationships with Management and with Other Supervisors . . . 132
- 7.8 Conclusions. . . . . 133

8. Organizations and the Computer Culture: The Mismanagement of Meaning?

Bjorn W. Hennestad

- 8.1 Introduction. . . . . 137
- 8.2 Organizations as Cultures. . . . . 137
- 8.3 Entering New Technology. . . . . 139
- 8.4 Direct Side Effects of Technological Development and Change . . 139
- 8.5 Indirect Side Effects of Computerization. . . . . 141
- 8.6 Implication: The Mismanagement of Meaning. . . . . 142
- 8.7 Technology as Cultural Imperialism?. . . . . 144

Part III. Innovation and the Social Environment

9. Variants of the Socialist Economic Management System in Eastern Europe

Bohdan Glinski

- 9.1 Introduction. . . . . 151
- 9.2 Poland and the Market Economy Solution. . . . . 153
- 9.3 How Realistic is the Self-Government Variant?. . . . . 154
- 9.4 The Decisive Role of the Central Plan. . . . . 155
- 9.5 Differences in the Central Administrative Structure. . . . . 156
- 9.6 Types of Enterprise and Innovative Activities. . . . . 158

10. The Social Frame of Innovation: The Example of Yugoslavia Drago Cengic
10.1 Introduction . . . . .	.163
10.2 Technological Development Within a Social Context . . . . .	.163
10.3 Some Features of Technological Development . . . . .	.165
10.4 The Economic System and Anti-Innovative Practice . . . . .	.167
10.5 Organizational Structure and Innovative Behaviour. . . . .	.169
11. Industrial Relations and High Technology: The Transformation of Telecommunications Through Deregulation Russel Eckel
11.1 From Regulated Monopoly to Deregulated Competition . . . . .	.173
11.2 Information Technology: Toward High-Tech Telecommunications . . . . .	.178
11.3 Attributes of Information Technology. . . . .	.180
11.4 Skills and Jobs in Transition . . . . .	.182
11.5 De-skilling, Job Quality, and Employee Satisfaction. . . . .	.185
11.6 Unions and Collective Bargaining in Transition . . . . .	.187
12. Technical Innovation and Economic Reform in Socialist Economies with Special Reference to China Martin Lockett
12.1 Introduction . . . . .	.191
12.2 The Chinese Background . . . . .	.193
12.3 The Impact of Economic Reforms. . . . .	.195
12.4 Technical Innovation and Economic Reform. . . . .	.197
12.5 Foreign Investment and Technology Transfer. . . . .	.200
12.6 Conclusions. . . . .	.202
13. Managerial Practices and Patterns of Employee Behaviour in the Soviet Enterprise Bruno Grancelli
13.1 Participation . . . . .	.205
13.2 Dealing in the 'Shadow Economy'. . . . .	.209
13.3 A Hypothesis on 'Mass Participation' and 'Mass Illegality' . . . . .	.212
13.3.1 High priority case. . . . .	.213
13.3.2 Low priority case. . . . .	.214
13.4 Some Concluding Remarks. . . . .	.214
14. "Democracy" in Worker-Owned Enterprises: The U.S. Experience Thomas J. Keil . . . . .	.221