Geleitwort	VII
Danksagung	IX
List of Abbreviations	XV
List of Figures	XVIII
List of Tables	XIX
1 Introduction and Outline	1
2 Income Distribution and Inequality	5
2.1 Tools of distributional judgement	5
2.2 Pen's parade.	8
2.3 Frequency distribution and log-normal distribution of income.	9
3 Measuring Income Inequality	15
3.1 Positive measures: scatter parameter.	15
3.1.1 Range.	15
3.1.2 Relative mean deviation.	16
3.1.3 Variance and coefficient of variation.	17
3.1.4 Logarithmic variance and variance of logarithms.	17
3.2 Positive measures: concentration parameter.	18
3.2.1 The Lorenz curve.	18
3.2.2 Comparisons between distributions.	20
3.2.3 Gini coefficient.	22
i
3.3 Normative measures.	22
3.3.1 The social welfare function.	23
3.3.2 Dalton's measure.	25
3.3.3 The Atkinson index.	25
3.4 Information theory and inequality.	26

3.4.1	Theil's entropy index.	21
3.4.2	Generalized entropy family.	21
3.5	An axiomatic approach to inequality measurement.	21
3.5.1	Basic properties for an index of inequality.	3i
3.5.1.1	Pigou-Dalton transfer principle.	3
3.5.1.2	Symmetry.	3:
3.5.1.3	Dalton population principle.	3:
3.5.1.4	Normalization rule.	3!
3.5.2	Axiomatically derived inequality indices.	3:
3.5.2.1	Additive decomposability.	3'
3.5.2.2	Source decomposability.	3!
4	Income Inequality in Europe	3!
4.1	Empirical evidence on income inequality among European countries . . .	4!
4.1.1	Data and measurement choices.	4!
4.1.2	Results.	4:
4.2	Trends in income inequality in Europe.	4:
4.2.1	Problems related with measuring the trend in income inequality	4:
4.2.2	Trend data from 1979 onwards.	4<
4.2.3	Longer term trends.	4!
4.3	'Europe-wide' income distribution.	4!
4.3.1	Eurostat-report	4:
4.3.1.1	Data source.	4:
4.3.1.2	Methodology.	4!
4.3.1.3	Results	5i
4.3.2	The approach by Beblo/Knaus	5
4.3.2.1	Concept, data and methodology.	5
4.3.2.2	The structure of income inequality in Euroland	5
4.3.3	The Atkinson approach.	5
4.4	Income inequality in transition economies in Europe.	5
4.4.1	Empirical evidence on income inequality during transition	5
4.4.2	Driving forces for an increase in income inequality during transition	6
