

Commentationes Scientiarum Socialium
22 1984

Karmela Liebkind

MINORITY IDENTITY AND IDENTIFICATION PROCESSES:
A SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY

Maintenance and Reconstruction of Ethnolinguistic Identity in Multiple Group Allegiance

CONTENTS:

	Page
PREFACE	11
PART I. THE SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY OF MINORITY IDENTITY
1. THE SOCIAL CONTEXT OF INTERGROUP RELATIONS
1.1 Social psychology and intergroup relations	15
1.2 Global trends in intergroup relations	18
1.3 The subtleties of minority policy	20
1.4 Culture and ethnicity	22
1.5 Levels of social consciousness	24
2. VALUE CONFLICTS AND THE POSITION OF MINORITIES
2.1 Vertical and horizontal stratification	27
2.2 Explaining group alignment	29
2.3 Cultural exchange and assimilation	32
2.4 Power relations and minority rebellion	34
2.5 Negative minority identity as "false consciousness"	37
2.6 The role of objective cultural reinforcement	39
3. IDENTITY: CONTENT AND PROCESSES
3.1 The development of the concept of identity	42
3.2 Cognitive and subjective aspects of identity	43
3.3 Towards a definition of identity	46
3.4 Social and personal identity in the light of cross-categorization	49
3.5 The stereotypical effects of categorization on identity	52
3.6 Affective evaluation, identification conflicts and identity development	54
4. IDENTITY: STRUCTURE AND CHANGE
4.1 Personal construct systems: cognitive and affective	58
4.2 The cognitive reconstruction of identity	60
4.3 The construct system, the entity system and the affective value system of identity	62
4.4 Identity structure and identity change	65
5. THE CONSTRUCTION OF MINORITY IDENTITY
5.1 Identity aspirations and intentional behaviour	69
5.2 The construction of ethnic reality	70

5.3	Social recognition from the minority perspective	72
5.4	Individual mobility as an assimilative strategy	74
5.5	The accommodation of a positive minority identity	76
6.	MULTIPLE GROUP ALLEGIANCE AND IDENTITY RECONSTRUCTION
6.1	Identity accommodation in multiple group allegiance	80
6.2	Value commitments and cognitive strategies in identity development	82
6.3	Processes of identity reconstruction	84
PART II. THE ETHNOLINGUISTIC IDENTITY OF THE SWEDISH-SPEAKING FINNS
7.	THE SWEDISH-SPEAKING MINORITY IN FINLAND
7.1	Ethnolinguistic vitality of the Swedish-speaking Finns	91
7.2	The value connotations of the Swedish language in Finland	93
7.3	The effects of language legislation on institutional support and group definitions	95
7.4	Demographic processes influencing the vitality of the group	98
7.5	The social status of the minority in an historical perspective	100
8.	THE INTERACTION BETWEEN SUBJECTIVE AND OBJECTIVE GROUP IDENTITY
8.1	The socio-economic status of the Swedish-speaking Finns	104
8.2	Subjective stereotypes of the minority and their effects	106
8.3	The interaction between objective conflicts and linguistic orientations within the minority	109
8.4	The consequences of conflicting identifications	112
9.	THE SOCIAL CONTEXT OF THE SWEDISH-SPEAKERS IN HELSINKI
9.1	The intergroup context of the most urbanized Swedish-speaking Finns	116
9.2	The two-generation sample from Helsinki	119
9.3	Problems of categorization and the definition of ethnolinguistic identity	121
9.4	The social background of the sample groups	124
10.	SOLUTIONS APPLIED TO THE METHODOLOGICAL PROBLEMS OF IDENTITY RESEARCH
10.1	General grid methodology in identity research	130
10.2	The grid procedure and the level of investigation in the Helsinki study	134
10.3	Methods for analysing the cognitive structure of identity	136
10.4	Methods for analysing the evaluative structure of identity	139
11.	THE STRUCTURE OF IDENTITY AND GROUP PERCEPTIONS
11.1	The structure and logic of the empirical analysis	143
11.2	The cognitive structure of identity	145
11.3	The evaluative structure of identity	148
11.4	The degree of stereotyping in intergroup and intragroup perceptions	152

12. IDENTIFICATION WITH TWO LANGUAGE GROUPS AND SIGNIFICANT OTHERS
12.1 The general emotional significance of group membership	156
12.2 Patterns of empathetic identification with two language groups .	159
12.3 The evaluative structure of the entity systems in the sample groups	163
12.4 Identification with significant others disregarding their group membership	167
13. CONCLUSIONS	172
SUMMARY	180
REFERENCES	184
APPENDICES	193