

Doing What Comes Naturally

! Change, Rhetoric, and the Practice of Theory in Literary and Legal Studies

Stanley Fish

Duke University Press Durham and London

Contents

Preface ix

i. Introduction: Going Down the Anti-Formalist Road i

Meaning and Constraint

2. With the Compliments of the Author:
Reflections on Austin and Derrida 37

3. Why No One's Afraid of
Wolfgang Iser 68

4. Working on the Chain Gang: Interpretation in Law and Literature 87

5. Wrong Again 103

6. Fish v. Fiss 120

7. Change 141

Professionalism

8. No Bias, No Merit: The Case Against
Blind Submission 163

9. Short People Got No Reason to Live:
Reading Irony 180

10. Profession Despise Thyself: Fear and
Self-Loathing in Literary Studies 197

11. Anti-Professionalism 215

12. Transmuting the Lump: *Paradise
Lost*, 1942—1979 247

	13. Don't Know Much About the Middle Ages: Posner on Law and Literature	294
Consequences	14. Consequences	315
	15. Anti-Foundationalism, Theory Hope, and the Teaching of Composition	342
	16. Still Wrong After All These Years	356
	17. Dennis Martinez and the Uses of Theory	372
	18. Unger and Milton	399
	19. Critical Self-Consciousness, Or Can We Know What We're Doing?	436
Rhetoric	20. Rhetoric	471
	21. Force	503
	22. Withholding the Missing Portion: Psychoanalysis and Rhetoric	525
	Notes	555
	Index	595

Post-Contemporary Interventions

Series Editors: Stanley Fish and Fredric Jameson