

THE ECONOMICS OF UNPAID WORK

Marga Bruyn-Hundt

THESIS PUBLISHERS
AMSTERDAM 1996

THE ECONOMICS OF UNPAID WORK

TABLE OF CONTENTS

1	INTRODUCTION	13
	PART I: UNPAID WORK IN THE NETHERLANDS	19
2	UNPAID WORK IN ECONOMIC THEORY	21
2.1	Introduction	21
2.2	Contents and scope of economic science	21
2.3	Production or consumption	24
2.4	The allocation of time: a micro-economic model	28
2.5	The price of unpaid work in economic theory	36
2.6	Summary and conclusion	39
3	METHODS TO VALUE UNPAID WORK	41
3.1	Introduction	41
3.2	The input method	41
3.3	The output method	45
3.4	Overview of calculations of the value of unpaid work	49
3.5	Summary and conclusion	51
4.	UNPAID WORK IN THE NETHERLANDS 1975-1990	53
4.1	Introduction	53
4.2	Time use research in the Netherlands: an overview	53
4.3	The data for this study	55
4.4	Types of unpaid work	56
4.5	Empirical estimations of the value of unpaid work in the Netherlands 1975-1990	58
4.6	Total workload per age group and between sexes	63
4.7	The division of paid and unpaid work between sexes	66
4.8	Unpaid work per household type	69
4.9	Summary and conclusion	70
5	THE SYSTEM OF NATIONAL ACCOUNTS	73
5.1	Introduction	73
5.2	What is measured by the System of National Accounts?	73
5.3	The debate about imputing the value of household services in National Accounts	74
5.4	Unpaid work in the Dutch National Accounts	80
5.5	Other economic phenomena and unpaid work	89
	5.5.1 Welfare and economic growth	89
	5.5.2 Economic fluctuations and unpaid work	92
	5.5.3 Employment and unpaid labour	93
	5.5.4 Unemployment and unpaid labour	96

5.5.5	Consumption and investments	98
5.5.6	Optimal allocation of production factors.	100
5.5.7	Public finance	102
5.6	Summary and conclusion	103
6	UNPAID WORK IN INCOME DISTRIBUTION	105
6.1	Introduction	105
6.2	What is measured by traditional income statistics?	105
6.3	Measuring income inequality	107
6.4	The combination of paid and unpaid work in income distribution: an overview	109
6.5	Unpaid work in the 1985 and 1990 Dutch income distribution	111
6.5.1	Data and method	111
6.5.2	Results	113
6.5.2.1	Income per household type	113
6.5.2.2	Income per household type and age group	119
6.5.2.3	Income inequality	121
6.6	Summary and conclusion	123
7	UNPAID WORK IN ECONOMIC MODELS	125
7.1	Introduction	125
7.2	Structure and scope of macroeconomic models	125
7.3	Models with special attention to gender	127
7.4	Criticism on MIMIC: an extended household sector model of the Netherlands Central Planning Bureau	129
7.5	The relation between paid and unpaid work	133
7.6	The implementation of unpaid work in macro models	140
7.7	Summary and conclusion	144
PART II: UNPAID WORK AND ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE		145
8	ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE: MOTIVATION AND MEASUREMENT	147
8.1	Introduction	147
8.2	Definition of economic independence	147
8.3	Economic independence and sex	148
8.4	Microeconomic measurement of economic independence	152
8.5	Macroeconomic measurement of economic independence	154
8.6	Economic independence as a target of economic policy	157
8.7	Resolutions of women's international conferences	158
8.8	National Accounts and economic independence	159
8.9	Summary and conclusion	160
9	ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE AND UNPAID WORK	161
9.1	Introduction	161
9.2	Welfare-systems in Europe	161
9.3	Wages for the housewife	164

9.4	Negative Income Tax or a basis income	168
9.5	Unpaid work: a pitfall	170
9.6	Equal rights policy and attitudes in the Netherlands since 1975	171
9.7	Policies for an equal sharing of paid and unpaid work	172
	9.7.1 Family policies	173
	9.7.2 Income policies	177
	9.7.3 Labour market policies	186
9.8	Summary and conclusion	191
10	SUMMARY	193
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	197
	INDEX	209
	CURRICULUM VITAE	215
	SAMENVATTING	217