

THE HERETICS OF FINANCE

Conversations with Leading Practitioners of Technical Analysis

Andrew W. Lo
and Jasmina Hasanhodzic

BLOOMBERG PRESS
NEW YORK

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	xiii
1 Ralph J. Acampora	1
2 Laszio Birinyi Jr.	11
3 Walter Deemer	25
4 Paul F. Desmond	31
5 Gail M. Dudack	39
6 Robert J. Farrell	47
7 Tan McAvity	57
8 John J. Murphy	65
9 Robert R. Prechter Jr.	75
10 Linda Bradford Raschke	81
11 Alan IV. Shaw	91
12 Anthony W. Tabell	99
13 Stan Weinstein	105
14 Conviction: Countering the Skeptics and the Scoundrels	115
The validity of technical analysis
Acceptance by academics
Sustaining confidence while sustaining losses
Literature versus experience

Hard-and-fast rules and proven theories
Wider applications for technical analysis
Proving the validity of technical analysis
15 The Evolution of Technical Analysis	143
Evolution of the craft
New indicators and patterns
Computer software and the craft
Computer-generated signals
Hand-drawn charts
16 Luck, Astrology, and Other Unsanctioned Signs	167
The role of luck in technical analysis
Astrology and the credibility of the craft
Elliott wave, Gann's postulates, and Fibonacci numbers
17 Creativity, Talent, and the Art of the Craft	185
The role of creativity
A talent for technical analysis
Personality traits of the highly successful trader
Hard work and dedication
Analysis as art
18 The Challenge of Emotions	199
Losing money
Emotional interference
Separating emotions from the work
19 The Path to Success	211
Formal education
Artificial intelligence
The key to success
20 Favorite Patterns and Indicators	227
Most and least reliable indicator
Testing
The effect of market conditions
Indicative versus descriptive
References	249
Index	252