

Growth Experience in Transition Countries, 1990-98

Oleh Havrylyshyn, Thomas Wolf, Julian Berengaut, Marta
Castello-Branco, Ron van Rooden, and Valerie Mercer-Blackman

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

Washington DC

1999

Contents

	Page
Preface	v
I Overview	1
II Analytical Framework of Growth: Relevance for Transition Economies	2
New Growth Theory and Empirical Evidence	2
Special Circumstances of Transition Economies	3
III Historical Record of Growth, 1990–98	4
Overview of the Main Growth Patterns	4
Resource Reallocation, Productivity, and Demand	11
IV Main Factors Associated with Growth in the Transition	16
Historical Evidence on Determinants of Growth	16
Role of IMF-Supported Programs in the Transition	26
V Conclusions	29
Annexes
I Efficiency Improvements, Reallocation, and Investment as Proximate Sources of Growth in the Transition: A Conceptual Framework	31
II Key Impediments and Contributing Factors to Growth: A Survey of IMF Country Economists' Views	32
III Regression Analysis of Key Factors Underlying Growth	35
IV The Structural Reform Index	39
V Detailed Data on Growth and IMF Programs	42
References	48
Boxes
Section
III 1. Unofficial Economy and GDP Estimates	7
2. Country Groups by Growth Performance and Region	10
3. Privatization, Restructuring, and Performance	12
4. Trade Patterns and Transition	13
IV 5. Sustainability and Reversals of Growth	17
6. Good Economic Governance	22
7. Growth Experience of Asian Transition Economies	23