

Dealing with Terrorism – Stick or Carrot?

Bruno S. Frey

Professor of Economics, University of Zurich, Switzerland

Edward Elgar

Cheltenham, UK • Northampton, MA, USA

Contents

Introduction	ix
PART I TERRORISM AND ANTI-TERRORIST POLICIES	1
1 Terrorism: The Curse of Our Times?	3
Terrorism today	3
Terrorism's long history	4
Types of terrorism	6
What is terrorism?	8
Can terrorism be measured?	10
Consequences of terrorism on the economy	17
Has terrorism been successful?	21
Suggested further reading	22
2 Using Deterrence Against Terrorism	27
Predominance of coercive anti-terror policy	27
Consequences of deterrence	29
Is deterrence effective?	35
Economic sanctions	37
Is deterrence a good anti-terrorist policy?	41
Suggested further reading	42
PART II AN ECONOMIC APPROACH TO TERRORISM	47
3 Terrorism Analysed	49
The economic approach to terrorism	49
Alternative approaches	61
Suggested further reading	63
4 Putting Policies into Perspective	68
Terrorists' incentives	68
The effects of deterrence policy	74
The effects of alternative anti-terrorist policies	78
Suggested further reading	80

PART III THREE POSITIVE POLICIES FOR DEALING WITH TERRORISM	83
5 Polycentricity Reduces Vulnerability	85
Making prospective targets safer	85
Economic decentralisation	87
Political decentralisation	88
A polycentric society	90
Is polycentricity viable?	91
Suggested further reading	93
6 Providing Positive Incentives Not to Engage in Terrorism	95
Positive and negative sanctions	95
Improved education and higher income	106
Intensifying social contacts and social integration	109
Evaluation	113
Suggested further reading	116
7 Diffusing Media Attention	120
Terrorism and the media	120
Effects of media coverage	123
Controlling the media	125
Reducing media attention by supplying more information	127
Suggested further reading	136
PART IV WHAT CAN BE DONE?	139
8 Comparing Anti-terrorist Policies	141
Many options	141
Criteria for anti-terrorist policies	142
The problem of evaluation	148
Combining anti-terrorist strategies	150
Suggested further reading	151
9 Conclusions	154
A continuous struggle	154
What are the incentives for policy-makers?	155
A plea for a positive approach	159
Suggested further reading	161

References	163
Name Index	175
Subject Index	179