

Multinational Corporations and Global Justice

Human Rights Obligations of a Quasi-Governmental Institution

Florian Wettstein

Stanford Business Books
An Imprint of Stanford University Press
Stanford, California

Contents

Preface ix

1	Introduction: A Plea for Global Justice	1
	Modernity, Inequality, and the Neoliberal Project of the Global Market	1
	The Inadequacy of the Utilitarian Worldview and Rawls's Failed Attempt to Correct It	5
	It Is Time to Act—But for Whom?	8
	The Ethical Perspective on Business	14
	Outlook and Further Arguments	18

PART I: Toward Rights-Based Cosmopolitan Justice: Principles, Obligations, and Agents

2	Principles of Global Justice	25
	Establishing Justice: The Indispensability of the Justice Perspective	25
	Justifying Justice: The Rightness of the Justice Perspective	29
	Equalizing Justice: The Egalitarian Foundation of the Justice Perspective	34
	Defining Justice: A Rights-Based Perspective on Egalitarian Justice	44
	Globalizing Justice: Exploring the Philosophical and Political Bounds of Justice	72
	Global Justice as Human Development	100

3	Obligations of Global Justice	115
	Responsibility and the Scope of Justice	116
	The Mirage of Social Justice?	118
	Justice or Virtue: Morally Owed or Merely Desired?	121
	Perfect and Imperfect Obligations of Justice	123
	Shifting the Focus from Causality to Capability	134
4	Agents of Global Justice	145
	Power and Moral Obligation: Individuals, Collectivities, and Institutions	146
	Primary and Secondary Agents of Justice	153
 PART II: Theory of the Quasi-Governmental Institution: Power and Authority in the Global Political Economy
5	Multinational Corporations Between Depoliticization of the Economy and Economization of Politics: Unfolding the Neoliberal Paradox	167
	Depoliticization of the Economy: Classical Liberalism	169
	Economization of Politics: Neoliberalism	174
	The Neoliberal Paradox: The Implicit Politicization of the Private Enterprise	177
6	Political Power and Authority of Multinational Corporations	180
	The Public Nature of Corporate Power	181
	Historical Foundations of Corporate Power	184
	Ingredients of Corporate Power	188
	Sources of Corporate Power: From Relational to Structural Power	193
	Structural Change and Corporate Power in the Global Political Economy	195
	The Public Expression of Corporate Power: Political Authority	207
7	When Multinational Corporations Act like Governments	213
	Governing People: Derber's "Corporate Mystique"	214
	Governing Markets: Networked Capitalism	221

Governing Governments: Sovereignty of States or of Corporations?	226
Governing Themselves: Corporate Rule Making	245

PART III: Multinational Corporations as Primary Agents of Justice: The Duty to Respect, Protect, and Proactively Realize Human Rights

8 Challenging Common Perceptions: Some Preliminary Conceptual Reflections on Multinational Corporations' Obligations of Justice	261
Refuting the Neoclassical Business Model: From Wealth Creation to Just Distribution	263
Challenging "Corporate Social Responsibility": From Beneficence to Obligations of Justice	269
Advancing Business and Human Rights: From "Do No Harm" to Human Development	282
9 Making Sense of Multinational Corporations' Obligations of Justice	290
Avoiding Injustice: The Duty to Respect Human Rights	291
Preventing Injustice: The Duty to Protect Human Rights	305
Restoring Justice: The Duty to Proactively Realize Human Rights	311
10 A Look into the Future: Restoring Democracy in the Global Age	348
A Necessity for the Present	349
A Vision for the Future	352
Notes	357
References	363
Index	399