Ethnic Politics and State Power in Africa

The Logic of the Coup–Civil War Trap

PHILIP ROESSLER
College of William & Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of Figures page xi
List of Tables xii
List of Maps xiv
Preface and Acknowledgments xv
List of Abbreviations xxvi

1 Introduction 1
1.1 The Purge: Juba, December 2013 1
1.2 Civil War in Weak States: Existing Approaches, Unanswered Questions 7
1.3 The Institutional Basis of Peace in Weak States 11
1.4 Central Argument: Ethnic Powersharing, Strategic Uncertainty, and the Coup–Civil War Trap in Africa 16
1.5 Theoretical Expectations 20
1.6 Research Design and Key Findings 21
1.7 A Look Ahead 28

PART I PUZZLE AND THEORY 31

2 A Meso-level Approach to the Study of Civil War 33
2.1 Introduction 33
2.2 The Weak State Paradigm of Civil War 36
2.3 The Microcomparative Turn in the Study of Civil War and Its Limitations 41
2.4 The Institutional Basis of Peace in Weak States: The Political Networks Hypothesis 44

2.5 Personal Rule, Ethnopolitical Networks, and Societal Peace in Africa 46
2.6 Conclusion 58

3 Theories of Ethnopolitical Exclusion 60
3.1 Introduction 60
3.2 What Is Ethnopolitical Exclusion? 63
3.3 Instrumental Theories of Ethnopolitical Exclusion 66
3.4 Cultural Theories of Ethnopolitical Exclusion 72
3.5 Strategic Theories of Ethnopolitical Exclusion 75
3.6 Conclusion: The Primacy of Strategic Models of Ethnopolitical Exclusion 81

4 The Strategic Logic of War in Africa 82
4.1 Introduction 82
4.2 Building Blocks of a Strategic Theory of Civil War 83
4.3 Summary and Hypotheses 98
4.4 Empirical Strategy 99

PART II THEORY-BUILDING CASE STUDY 101

5 Political Networks, Brokerage, and Cooperative Counterinsurgency: Civil War Averted in Darfur 103
5.1 Introduction 103
5.2 Historical Background 108
5.3 The Origin and Organization of Sudan's Islamic Movement 119
5.4 The Tanzim in Darfur 127
5.5 Al-Ingaz and the Pacification of Darfur 130
5.6 A Disaffected Islamist and the Coalescence of a Dissident Group 135
5.7 Insurgency versus Counterinsurgency in Darfur, 1991–1992 138
5.8 Analysis and Theoretical Implications: Exploring the Political Networks Hypothesis 142
5.9 Conclusion: Political Networks and the Feasibility of Armed Rebellion 146

6 The Strategic Logic of Ethnopolitical Exclusion: The Breakdown of Sudan's Islamic Movement 147
6.1 Introduction 147
6.2 The Sheikh versus the Field Marshal 151
6.3 The Ethnoregional Dimension to the Elite Conflict 161
6.4 Ethnic Exclusion and Ethnic Balancing 169
6.5 Analysis and Theoretical Implications: Exploring the Strategic Logic of Ethnopolitical Exclusion 174
6.6 Conclusion 176

7 Political Exclusion and Civil War: The Outbreak of the Darfur Civil War 178
7.1 Introduction 178
7.2 The Origins of the Second Darfur Rebellion 181
7.3 A Critical Juncture in Darfur: Non-cooperative Counterinsurgency 186
7.4 The Outbreak of Full-Scale Civil War 190
7.5 Analysis of Link between Political Exclusion and the Second Darfur Rebellion 199
7.6 Conclusion 203

PART III TESTING THE ARGUMENT 205

8 Empirical Analysis of the Coup–Civil War Trap 207
8.1 Introduction 207
8.2 Empirical Strategy: Using the Ethnic Power Relations Dataset to Capture Ethnopolitical Networks in Sub-Saharan Africa 208
8.3 Testing the Coup–Civil War Trap 211
8.4 Empirical Analysis: Access to Power and the Coup–Civil War Trade-Off 215
8.5 Testing the Strategic Logic of Ethnopolitical Exclusion, Part I: Regime Breakdown in Africa's Ethnically Divided Regimes 221
8.6 Testing the Strategic Logic of Ethnopolitical Exclusion, Part II: Africa's Co-conspirator Civil Wars 228
8.7 Co-conspirators at War 235
8.8 Conclusion 241

9 A Model-Testing Case: Explaining Africa's Great War 243
9.1 Introduction 243
9.2 From Comrades-in-Arms to Belligerents at War: Explaining the Political Dynamics of Africa's Great War 246
9.3 Instrumentalist Theories of Conflict and Africa's Great War 252
9.4 Kabila, His Co-conspirators, and the Commitment Problem 256
9.5 Endgame 262
9.6 Conclusion 265

PART IV EXTENSIONS 267

10 The Strategic Logic of Peace in Africa 269
10.1 Introduction 269
10.2 Threat Capabilities and Self-Enforcing Powersharing 271

10.3 Empirical Evidence: The Effect of Balance of Threat Capabilities on Ethnopolitical Bargaining 275
10.4 Discussion and Sensitivity Analysis 278
10.5 Implications 285
10.6 Conclusion 289
11 Conclusion 291
11.1 Summary of the Argument and Evidence 291
11.2 Contributions 295
11.3 Avenues for Future Research 299
11.4 Beyond Africa: Insights from the Coup–Civil War Trap for Understanding State Failure in Iraq and Syria 302
11.5 Policy Implications: Ending the Coup–Civil War Trap in Africa 308

Appendix 1 A Note on the Book's Qualitative Methods 317
Appendix 2 Data Variable Dictionary 321
Appendix 3 Data on Ethnic Transfers of Power and Ethnicity of Coup Conspirators and Insurgents 325
References 360
Index 379