

A DREAMING LIFE

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF CHIEF TWINS SEVEN-SEVEN

THE EKERIN-BASHORUN ATUNLUTO OF IBADANLAND

edited by Ulli Beier

from conversations with Twins Seven-Seven

Bayreuth African Studies 52

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	5
Introduction	7

Early Life

I. When I want to do a fantastic drawing, I like to fight somebody	13
II. I am just in a dreaming life	23
III. They came with brushes in one hand and a bag of knowledge in the other	29

Music and Politics

IV. Music and politics	37
V. My accident and how I got out of politics	47

Patrons and Promoters

VI. Nowadays they have to sweat to find me - my patrons and collectors	57
VII. I wasn't a businessman then - all I wanted was to hear my voice on the record	65

Religion

VIII. I should have been a Shango priest - if not for the fact that this modern world has come	73
IX. When there is too much pleasure, you don't see anything: you are in darkness totally	87
X. Born to die - but I don't believe that anybody really ever dies	99

Trade, Cars & Cooking

XI. I can't help trading, because trade is what I was born with	115
XII. Maybe when I came to this world before, I didn't have any cars - That's why I am so much in love with cars now	123
XIII. I love cooking - it's like painting	131

Women

XIV. It has been written that I have seven wives - that's why when one goes I always like to replace her with another one	147
XV. The ideas they injected into my wife's heart	171
XVI. Maybe we could have had a baby together for historical purposes	179

Comments on Paintings

XVII. The Devil's Dog - four works	191
XVIII. Eight etchings produced in Sydney in Dec. 1984 and Jan. 1985	195

Illustrations

Twins Seven-Seven - works in public collections	199
Notes	201