

THE FOUR ASIAN TIGERS

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT
—————AND THE—————
GLOBAL POLITICAL ECONOMY

Edited by

Eun Mee Kim

Department of Sociology
University of Southern California
Los Angeles, California and
Graduate School of International Studies
Ewha Womans University
Seoul, South Korea

ACADEMIC PRESS

San Diego London Boston New York Sydney Tokyo Toronto

CONTENTS

Contributors	xi
Preface	xiii

PART I THE REGIONAL AND GLOBAL CONTEXTS FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

CHAPTER 1

The Political Economy of Economic Growth in East Asia: South Korea and Taiwan

Kwang Yeong Shin

I. Introduction	3
II. Social Formations in the 20th Century	5
III. Regime Types	6
A. The Developmental State in East Asia	7
IV. Organization of Production	10
A. Soft Budget-Constrained Firms	10
B. Factory Despotism	11
V. East Asian Production and the Segmented American Market	14
VI. Geopolitics and the Dynamics of the Global Economic System	17
A. U.S. Aid	18
B. Two Wars and the East Asian Economy	19
C. Accessibility of the U.S. Market	20
D. Global Capitalism: Flow of Capital and Labor	21
VII. Summary and Discussion	25
A. Interaction of Multiple Factors and the Applicability of East Asian Economic Model to Other Third World Countries	25
References	28

CHAPTER 2
Defining Security in East Asia: History,
Hotspots, and Horizon-Gazing

Victor D. Cha

I. Introduction	33
II. History: The Origins of Security in East Asia	34
A. The Cold War, Decolonization, and Containment	37
B. Loose Bipolarity and the Sino-Soviet Split	39
C. Detente	41
D. Bipolarity's Return: The New Cold War	44
III. Hotspots: Post-Cold War Security Tiers in East Asia	46
A. The Second Tier	47
B. The Third Tier	51
IV. Horizon: The Major Powers	53
V. Conclusion	58

CHAPTER 3
The Export-Oriented Industrialization
of Pacific Rim Nations and Their Presence in the Global Market

Ichiro Numazaki

I. Introduction	61
II. The Trajectory of EOI in the Pacific Rim	62
A. The World's Fastest-Growing Economies	62
B. Industrialization as the Engine of Growth	64
C. Exports as the Market for Growth	66
III. The Structure of EOI in the Pacific Rim	70
A. Product Cycles on an International Scale	71
B. American Outsourcing	74
C. The Import-Dependent EOI	76
D. Japanese Outprocessing	78
E. EOI as Fragmentary Industrialization	80
IV. The Roles of the Four Tigers in the 1990s	81
A. South Korea: The Base of Independent Exporters	81
B. Taiwan: The Home of Internationalizing Subcontractors	82
C. Singapore: The Center for International Procurement	83
D. Hong Kong: The Hub of the Greater South China Economic Zone	84

V. Conclusion	86
References	87

PART II

THE ACTORS AND INSTITUTIONS OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

CHAPTER 4

Commodity Chains and Regional Divisions of Labor in East Asia

Gary Gereffi

I. States, Markets, and Networks in East Asia's Economic Miracle	94
II. Producer-Driven and Buyer-Driven Commodity Chains	98
III. Export Roles and Industrial Upgrading in East Asia	100
IV. The Emergence of Regional Divisions of Labor in East Asia: A Commodity Chains Interpretation	103
V. The Transformation of East Asia's Apparel Commodity Chain	106
VI. Competing U.S. and Japanese Production Networks in the Asian Electronics Commodity Chain	116
VII. Conclusion	120
References	122

CHAPTER 5

State Autonomy and Its Social Conditions for Economic Development in South Korea and Taiwan

Hee-Yeon Cho and Eun Mee Kim

I. Introduction	125
II. Theoretical Discussions of State Autonomy and Class Context in East Asian Capitalist Industrialization	127
A. State-Centered Studies of East Asian Growth	128
B. State Autonomy and Social Conditions	129
C. A Conservative Anticommunist Society and Social Conditions of State Autonomy	132

III. State and Class in the Conservative Anticommunist Society	133
A. Establishment of the Conservative Anticommunist Society and Change of Class Conditions (1945-Early 1960s)	133
B. The Deepening of the Conservative Anticommunist Society and Unlimited State Autonomy (1960s)	138
C. The Rising Tensions within the Conservative Anticommunist Society and Repressive State Autonomy (1970s)	140
D. Crisis in the Conservative Anticommunist Society and Transformation of State-Class Relations	146
IV. Conclusion	153
References	155

CHAPTER 6

Is Small Beautiful? The Political Economy of Taiwan's Small-Scale Industry

Karl Fields

I. Introduction	159
II. New Institutionalism and Flexible Specialization	161
III. What Is Small? The Organizational Structure of Taiwan's SME	164
IV. Enabling Factors and Obstacles to Flexible Production	170
V. The State as Promoter of Flexible Specialization	174
VI. Conclusion	178
References	179

CHAPTER 7

Industrial Flexibility, Economic Restructuring, and East Asian Labor

Frederic C. Deyo

I. Industrial Transformation and Labor Response	184
II. The Political Sources of Labor's Weakness	187
III. The Economic Structural Demobilization of Labor	189
IV. Flexible Production and the New Competition	190

Contents

V. Flexible Production Strategies in East Asia	192
A. Hong Kong	192
B. Taiwan	193
C. South Korea	194
D. Singapore	195
VI. The Social Impact of Restructuring: Economic Dualism	196
VII. Dynamic Flexibility, Participation, and Autocracy	197
VIII. Economic Governance, Labor, and the Instituting of Flexible Production	198
IX. Autocratic Flexibility and Learning-Based Industrialization	201
X. Trade Unionism under Industrial Restructuring	202
XI. Conclusion	203
References	204

CHAPTER 8

Crisis in Korea and the IMF Control

Su-Hoon Lee

I. The Structural Dimension: The Model	210
II. The Institutional Dimension: The Financial Sector	216
III. The Short-Term Policy Dimension: Human Errors	218
IV. Impacts of IMF Control	220
V. An Alternative Model?	225

Index	229
-------	-----