

The Organization of the Oil Industry, Past and Present

Charles F. Mason

H. A. True Chair in Petroleum and Natural Gas Economics
Department of Economics & Finance
University of Wyoming,
1000 E. University Ave.
Laramie, WY 82071, USA
bambuzir@uwyo.edu

the essence of k(ledge

Boston — Delft

Contents

1	Introduction	3
2	Modeling Oil Production	9
2.1	The Hotelling-Gray model	9
2.2	Some inconvenient facts	11
2.3	Exploration	14
2.4	Enhanced oil recovery	17
3	Standard Oil, Drawbacks and the South Improvement Company	21
3.1	Introduction	21
3.2	A simple model of drawbacks	23
3.3	Discussion	25
4	Oil Production under the Rule of Capture	27
4.1	Introduction	27
4.2	Oil as a common property resource	28
4.3	Unitization	31
5	The Battle for Control of Global Crude Oil Markets	37
5.1	Introduction	37

5.2	The seven sisters as a dominant buyer	39
5.3	OPEC as a dominant seller	43
6	Collusion in Theory	47
6.1	Introduction	47
6.2	A simple model	49
6.3	Simulation results	51
7	What Motivates Membership in OPEC?	57
7.1	Introduction	57
7.2	An empirical model of opec membership	59
7.3	Results	64
8	Recent Events	71
8.1	Introduction	71
8.2	Unconventional oil	72
8.3	Arab spring	76
8.4	Upward trends in oil prices	79
8.5	Future directions	81
	References	85