

The Equity Risk Premium

Essays and Explorations

William N. Goetzmann

Roger G. Ibbotson

Yale School of Management

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

2006

Contents

Contributors ix

Introduction: Opening Remarks and Motivation 3

Part I The Lessons of History

- 1 History and the Equity Risk Premium 25
- 2 Stocks, Bonds, Bills, and Inflation: Year-by-Year Historical Returns (1926–1974) 41
- 3 A New Historical Database for the NYSE 1815 to 1925: Performance and Predictability 73
- 4 The United States Market Wealth Portfolio 107
- 5 World Wealth: U.S. and Foreign Market Values and Returns 138

Part II Demand, Supply, and Building Block Forecasting Methods

- 6 How to Forecast Long-Run Asset Returns 175
- 7 The Demand for Capital Market Returns: A New Equilibrium Theory 184
- 8 The Supply of Capital Market Returns 201
- 9 Building the Future from the Past 212
- 10 Long-Run Stock Returns: Participating in the Real Economy 214

Part III Simulating and Forecasting

- 11 Stocks, Bonds, Bills, and Inflation: Simulations of the Future (1976–2000) 237
- 12 Predictions of the Past and Forecasts for the Future: 1976–2025 266
- 13 Short-Horizon Inputs and Long-Horizon Portfolio Choice 270

Part IV Survivorship and Selection Bias

- 14 Survival 283
- 15 Survivorship Bias in Performance Studies 307
- 16 Global Stock Markets in the 20th Century 335
- 17 Re-Emerging Markets 365

Part V Predicting Variations

- 18 The Dow Theory: William Peter Hamilton's Track Record Reconsidered 407

19	Patterns in Three Centuries of Stock Market Prices	431
20	Bootstrapping Tests of Long-Term Stock Market Efficiency	454
21	Testing the Predictive Power of Dividend Yields	473
22	A Longer Look at Dividend Yields	494
23	Does Asset Allocation Policy Explain 40, 90, or 100 Percent of Performance?	521
	Suggested Readings	535
	Index	539