Contemporary Russian Cinema
Symbols of a New Era

Vlad Strukov
Contents

List of Figures vii
Acknowledgements viii
Note on Transliteration x
Figures xi

Introduction

- Conceptualising the period 1
- Overview of the contemporary Russian film industry and its institutions 4
- Critical review of scholarship on contemporary Russian film 10
- Contextualising the present study 14
- Theorising contemporary Russian cinema 19

1 Abstracted Subjectivity and Knowledge-Worlds: Aleksandr Sokurov's Taurus (2001) 36
3 Gatekeepers of (Non-)Knowledge: Aleksei Balabanov's Morphine (2008) 72
4 Symbolic Folds and Flattened Discourse: Andrei Zviagintsev's Elena (2010) 91
5 Non-Knowledge and the Symbolic Mode: Nikolai K homeriki's A Tale About Darkness (2009) 109
6 The World and the Event: Kirill Serebrennikov's St George's Day (2008) 127
9 The Difficulty of Being Dead: Aleksandr Veledinski’s Alive (2006) 181
12 Amplifications of Subjectivity: Aleksandr Zel'dovich's The Target (2010) 236
                   Conclusions 253

Filmography 258
Bibliography 264
Index 281