- 1 Introduction 1
  - 1.1 The Rediscovery of Geography 1
  - 1.2 Linkages and Circular Causation 4
  - 1.3 Modeling Tricks: Dixit-Stiglitz, Icebergs, Evolution, and the Computer 6
  - 1.4 Two Useful Questions 9
  - 1.5 Plan of the Book 10
- I Some Intellectual Background 13
- 2 Antecedents I: Urban Economics 15
  - 2.1 The von Thünen Model 15
  - 2.2 Explaining Cities: External Economies 18
  - 2.3 Urban Systems 19
  - 2.4 Multiple Subcenters 22
  - 2.5 Uses and Limits of Traditional Urban Economics 23
  - Notes 24
- 3 Antecedents II: Regional Science 25
  - 3.1 Central-Place Theory 26
  - 3.2 Base-Multiplier Analysis 27
  - 3.3 Market Potential Analysis 32
  - 3.4 Limitations of Regional Science 33
  - Appendix: A Brief Introduction to Bifurcations 34
  - Notes 41

II	Labor Mobility and Regional Development	43
4	The Dixit-Stiglitz Model of Monopolistic Competition and Its Spatial Implications	45
4.1	Consumer Behavior	46
4.2	Multiple Locations and Transport Costs	49
4.3	Producer Behavior	50
4.4	Some Normalizations	54
4.5	The Price Index Effect and the Home Market Effect	55

III The Urban System 117

8 Spatial Models of Urban Systems: A Heuristic
Introduction	119
8.1 Location Decisions and the Distribution of Demand	120
8.2 Sustaining and Locking In Urban Location	121
8.3 Population Growth and City Formation	126
8.4 Urban Hierarchies	128
8.5 Ports and Transportation Hubs	129
8.6 Conclusions	131
Notes	132
9 The Monocentric Economy	133
9.1 The Model	134
9.2 The von Thünen Economy	136
9.3 The Market Potential Function	140
9.4 The Potential Function and the Sustainability of a City	143
Appendix 9.1: On the Definition of the Market Potential Function	148
Appendix 9.2: The Limit Market Potential Function	149
Notes	149
10 The Emergence of New Cities	151
10.1 Adjustment Dynamics and the Stability of the Spatial System	152
10.2 From One City to Three	154
10.3 Emergence of New Cities in the Long Run	160
10.4 Conclusions	167
Appendix 10.1: Bifurcation with Costly Transport of Agricultural Goods	168
Appendix 10.2: Supplementary Calculations for
Appendix 10.1	171
Appendix 10.3: Adjustment Dynamics of a General Three-City Case	175
Notes	179

11	Evolution of a Hierarchical Urban System	181
11.1	The Formation of an Urban Hierarchy in Nineteenth-Century America	182
11.2	The Model	184
11.3	The Monocentric System	186
11.4	Self-Organization Toward a Hierarchical System	191
11.5	Conclusions	203
	Appendix 11.1: The Equilibrium of the Agricultural Market	205
	Appendix 11.2: The Equilibrium Conditions of the Monocentric Economy	206
	Appendix 11.3: The Proof that (11.16) Implies (11.17)	207
	Notes	212
12	An Empirical Digression: The Sizes of Cities	215
12.1	The Size Distribution of Cities	215
12.2	Do Urban Theories Predict the Rank-Size Rule?	217
12.3	Can Random Growth Explain the Rank-Size Rule?	219
12.4	Conclusions	225
	Note	225
13	Ports, Transportation Hubs, and City Location	227
13.1	The Monocentric Economy	228
13.2	The Impact of a Transportation Hub on the Market Potential Function	231
13.3	Patterns of Spatial Evolution	233
13.4	Conclusions	235
	Notes	236
IV	International Trade	237
14	International Specialization	239
14.1	A Model with Intermediate Goods	241
14.2	The Structure of Equilibria	245
14.3	Agglomeration and National Inequalities	251
14.4	Decreasing Returns in Agriculture	256
14.5	Conclusions	259
	Appendix 14.1: Symmetry Breaking	260
	Appendix 14.2: Simulation Parameters	261
	Notes	261

15	Economic Development and the Spread of Industry	263
15.1	Growth and Sustainable Wage Differentials	264
15.2	Many Industries and Many Countries	270
15.3	Conclusions	277
	Appendix 15.1: The Multicountry, Multi-Industry Model	278
	Appendix 15.2: Simulation Parameters	280
	Notes	281
16	Industrial Clustering	283
16.1	Industrial Clusters: The Evidence	284
16.2	Industrial Clusters: The Model	285
16.3	Concentration or Dispersion?	287
16.4	Adjustment and Real Income	291
16.5	Multiple Factors: Industrial Clustering in a Heckscher-Ohlin World	293
16.6	Multiple Industries and Sustainable Cross-Country Differences	298
16.7	Conclusions	303
	Appendix 16.1: Symmetry Breaking	304
	Appendix 16.2: Adjustment and Real Income	305
	Appendix 16.3: The Production Possibility Frontier	306
	Appendix 16.4: Multiple Industries	306
	Appendix 16.5: Simulation Parameters	307
	Notes	307
17	A Seamless World	309
17.1	The Model	310
17.2	The Frequency of Agglomeration	313
17.3	From Local to Global	317
17.4	Punctuated Equilibrium	319
17.5	Multiple Industries	321
17.6	Center and Periphery	322
17.7	Conclusions	325
	Appendix 17.1: Symmetry Breaking	325
	Appendix 17.2: Simulation Parameters	326
	Notes	327
18	External Trade and Internal Geography	329
18.1	Urban Concentration in an Open Economy	331
18.2	The Effects of Trade Liberalization	332

18.3 Industrial Clustering and External Trade	335
18.4 Industrial Structure and Urban Concentration	338
18.5 Conclusions	340
Appendix 18.1: Symmetry Breaking	341
Appendix 18.2: Simulation Parameters	343
Notes	343
19 The Way Forward	345
19.1 The Theoretical Menu	346
19.2 Empirical Work	347
19.3 Quantification	347
19.4 Welfare Implications	348
19.5 Where We Stand	349
