

THE HUMANE COMEDY CONSTANT, TOCQUEVILLE AND FRENCH LIBERALISM

GEORGE ARMSTRONG KELLY

Late Visiting Professor of Humanities and Political Science, Johns Hopkins University

WITH A FOREWORD BY STEPHEN R. GRAUBARD

*The right of the University of Cambridge
to print and sell
all manner of books
was granted by Henry VIII in 1534.
The University has printed and published continuously since 1584.*

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge

New York .Port Chester

Melbourne Sidney

Contents

Foreword: Stephen R. Graubard	page ix
Acknowledgements	xiv
1 PORTS IN THE STORM
i Liberty: last port of call	i
II Benjamin Constant afloat: hospital or pantheon	6
m Royer-Collard: steering by the Charter	17
iv Tocqueville: sailing the open sea	27
2 CONSTANT VERSUS TOCQUEVILLE
1 Social settings of the political self	39
II Ages of the spirit	55
m Ancestral voices	69
3 IN PARTIBUS FIDELIUM
I Faith in freedom	85
II Protestant protocols: Necker, Madame de Stael, Vinet, Guizot	93
m Catholic submissions: Lacordaire, Montalembert	115
4 PHILOSOPHY AS CIVIL RELIGION
1 How dogmas begin: Jouffroy, Cousin, Damiron	134
II How dogmas develop: Cousin	155
in How dogmas dissolve: the "affaire Pascal"	168

5 LAMARTINE, LIBERALISM'S FALLEN ANGEL

i	Ut poesis politica	?	181
II	Another kind of liberty	„	196
m	Liberalism against liberals		209

D PARNASSIAN LIBERALISM

1	Steps to Parnassus		221
11	The sadness of Tocqueville		227
in	The airs of Renan		236
iv	The disgust of Flaubert		245

Index			256
--------------	--	--	-----