1	Introduction	1
1.1	Overview	1
1.2	Objectives of this study	3
2	Survey of research on vote and popularity functions	5
2.1	Theoretical background of popularity and vote functions	6
2.1.1	Downsian theory	7
2.1.2	Earlier theoretical models	7
2.1.3	Later theoretical research	9
2.1.3.1	Dynamics of the models	9
2.1.3.2	Voters' expectations and perceptions	9
2.1.3.3	Different hypotheses on voter behaviour	11
2.2	Empirical research on vote and popularity functions	13
2.2.1	Earlier empirical results	13
2.2.2	Later empirical results	15
2.2.3	Research based on cross section data	18
2.2.4	Research on models using subjective evaluations	19
2.2.5	Forecasting party support and election outcomes	21
2.2.6	Other new directions	22
2.2.7	Research in Finland	22
3	Some characteristics of economic and political developments in Finland	24
3.1	Post war era	24
3.2	Period from 1983 to 1995	26
3.2.1	Economic conditions	26
3.2.2	Popularity ratings	28
3.3	Subjective economic evaluations	29
3.4	Government expenditure and net borrowing	31
4	Specification of vote and popularity functions for Finland	33
4.1	Choosing of variables	33
4.1.1	Vote function	33
4.1.2	Popularity function	37
4.2	Vote function	41
4.3	Popularity function	42

4.4	Hypotheses related to vote and popularity functions	44
5	Econometric analysis of vote and popularity functions	47
5.1	Misspecification testing	48
5.1.1	Selection of tests and test statistics	49
	Autocorrelation, normality and heteroskedasticity	49
	Functional form	50
	Parameter time invariance	50
	Multicollinearity	51
5.1.2	Results of misspecification tests	52
	Autocorrelation	52
	Normality	53
	Heteroskedasticity	54
	Functional form	54
	Testing for time dependency	54
5.2	Respecification of the models	62
5.2.1	From general to specific modelling	62
5.3	Model selection	64
6	Empirical results on vote and popularity functions	67
6.1	Finnish vote functions	67
6.2	Finnish popularity functions	71
6.2.1	Period from 1983:6 to 1995:3	71
	National Coalition Party	72
	Center Party	74
	Social Democratic Party	75
	Left Wing Alliance	77
6.2.2	Periods of incumbency and opposition	78
	National Coalition Party	78
	Center Party	80
	Social Democratic Party	81
	Left wing Alliance	83
6.2.3	Impact of changes in coalition	83
6.2.4	Models including electoral cycles	85
6.2.5	Models based on subjective economic evaluations	87
6.2.5.1	Models explaining subjective economic evaluations	87
6.2.5.2	Subjective economic evaluations in popularity functions	89
6.2.6	Predicting party popularity and election outcomes	94

7	Political business cycles	101
7.1	Theoretical background	101
7.1.1	Vote-maximizing parties and nonrational voters	102
7.1.2	Ideological parties and nonrational voters	102
7.1.3	Vote-maximizing parties and rational voters	103
7.1.4	Ideological parties and rational voters	103
7.1.5	Ideological and vote-maximizing parties	104
7.1.6	Other models	105
7.2	Empirical evidence	105
7.2.1	Electoral cycles	106
7.2.2	Partisan cycles	108
7.3	Political business cycles in Finland	111
7.3.1	Econometric models for testing political business cycles	112
7.3.2	Political business cycles in a small open economy	116
7.3.3	Choosing of dependent variables	117
7.4	Empirical results	117
7.4.1	Electoral cycles	118
7.4.2	Partisan cycles	119
8	Summary and conclusions	132
8.1	Popularity and vote functions	132
8.2	Political business cycles	137
