

China's Economic Transformation

GREGORY C. CHOW

Princeton University

 BLACKWELL
Publishers

Contents

List of Figures and Tables	x
Preface	xii
Introduction: The Transformation of China's Economy	1
Part I: Historical Background and General Survey	7
1 Economic Lessons from History	9
1.1 Introduction	9
1.2 Significant Events in Major Historical Dynasties	10
1.3 The Republic of China, 1911–	16
1.4 Summary of Historical Lessons	21
2 Experiments with Planning and Economic Disruptions	24
2.1 The Communist Party Rises to Power	24
2.2 Historical Review: 1949–78	26
2.3 A Model of the Chinese Planned Economy	28
2.4 The Behavior of Economic Units in a Planned Economy	32
2.5 Output Planning in Theory and Practice	35
2.6 Organization and Administration of Economic Planning	40
3 Economic Reform up to the Mid-1990s	46
3.1 Why Economic Reform Started in 1978	46
3.2 Agriculture	48
3.3 Reform of State-owned Enterprises	49
3.4 Price Reform	51
3.5 The Banking System	52
3.6 Foreign Trade and Investment	53
3.7 The Nonstate Sectors	53

3.8	Institutional Infrastructure	54
3.9	Reform Policies Similar to Those of Taiwan	55
3.10	Reasons for the Success of China's Economic Reform	58
3.10	Summary	62
	Appendix: China's Geography	63
4	Further Reform: Problems and Prospects	68
4.1	Introduction	68
4.2	Enterprise Reform	69
4.3	Banking Reform	71
4.4	Foreign Trade and Investment during the Asian Financial Crisis	75
4.5	The Impact of WTO Membership	77
4.6	Prospects for Reform	83
	Part II: Analysis of the Macroeconomy	87
5	Economic Growth	89
5.1	The Neoclassical Model of Economic Growth	89
5.2	Data on Output, Capital, and Labor	90
5.3	A Review of Regression Analysis	93
5.4	Estimating Production Functions for China	96
5.5	Use of the Neoclassical Growth Model to Forecast GDP	99
5.6	How Large will the Chinese Economy be in 2020?	102
6	Economic Fluctuations	105
6.1	The Multiplier-Accelerator Model of Economic Fluctuations	105
6.2	Dynamic Properties of the Multiplier-Accelerator Model	108
6.3	An Econometric Method for Estimating Parameters of Linear Stochastic Equations	110
6.4	Estimating a Multiplier-Accelerator Model of the Chinese Economy	111
6.5	Econometric Models of the Chinese Economy	114
7	Macroeconomic Policies	117
7.1	Introduction	117
7.2	Monetary Policy	119
7.3	Estimating a Dynamic Equation to Explain the Inflation Rate	124
7.4	Basic Facts about Government Revenue and Expenditure	125
7.5	Fiscal Policy	126
8	The Effects of Political Movements on the Macroeconomy	129
8.1	Specification of a Dynamic Optimization Model of the Chinese Economy	129
8.2	The Solution of the Dynamic Optimization Problem	132
8.3	Statistical Estimation	136
8.4	Measuring the Effects of Two Political Events	140

8.5	Conclusions	144
Part III: Topics in Economic Development		147
9	Consumption	149
9.1	Trends in Per Capita Consumption	149
9.2	Household Expenditure Patterns	153
9.3	Rural Per Capita Consumption Expenditures in 1998 by Province	161
9.4	Consumption of Housing in Rural and Urban Areas	162
9.5	Forecasting Demand for Computers	163
10	Western Development and Environmental Policies	168
10.1	Inequality in Per Capita Consumption and East-west Disparity	169
10.2	Developing the Western Part of China	170
10.3	Environmental Policies	176
10.4	A Study of Industrial Pollution	178
11	Population	181
11.1	The Role of Population and Human Capital in Economic Development	181
11.2	Chinese Population and its Rate of Growth	183
11.3	Population Policy	186
11.4	Evaluation of China's Population Policy	189
11.5	Economic Explanation of the Birth Rate	191
12	Human Capital	194
12.1	The Importance of Human Capital and its Measurement	194
12.2	Labor Supply and Demand	196
12.3	Investment in Human Capital	202
12.4	Measuring the Rates of Return to Schooling in China	210
12.5	Health Services	212
Part IV: Analysis of Individual Sectors		217
13	The Banking and Financial System	219
13.1	Commercial Banks	219
13.2	The People's Bank	221
13.3	Factors Affecting the Functioning of the Banking System	223
13.4	Possible Weaknesses of the System	225
13.5	Possible Directions of Reform	227
13.6	The Financial Condition of Commercial Banks and the Bad-loan Problem	229
13.7	Other Financial Institutions	229
13.8	The Role of the Chinese Government in Reforming the Financial System	233

14	Shanghai Stock Price Determination	237
14.1	Introduction	237
14.2	A Model of Stock Price Determination	238
14.3	Empirical Findings from the Shanghai Stock Exchange	241
14.4	Comparison with Findings for Hong Kong and New York Stocks	245
14.5	Concluding Comments	246
15	The Behavior of State Enterprises	249
15.1	Organization of a State Enterprise under Central Planning	249
15.2	Planning and Operations of a Large-scale State Enterprise	253
15.3	A Simple Model of a State Enterprise under Central Planning	257
15.4	A Simple Model of a State Enterprise after Initial Reform	260
15.5	State Enterprise Restructuring in the Late 1990s and its Effects on Enterprise Behavior	263
16	The Nonstate Sectors	268
16.1	Relative Growth of Nonstate Sectors	268
16.2	Private Enterprises Prior to 1949	270
16.3	Economic Conditions for the Growth of Township and Village Enterprises	270
16.4	Econometric Measurement of the Relative Efficiency of State Enterprises and TVEs	273
16.5	Characteristics of a Free-market Economy	274
16.6	Characteristics of the Chinese Market Economy	277
17	Foreign Trade	281
17.1	Some Statistics of China's Foreign Trade	281
17.2	Explanation of Trading Patterns under Free Trade	282
17.3	The Determination of Foreign-exchange Rates	288
17.4	China's Foreign Trade Policy	293
17.5	Chinese Foreign Trade Problems in the Early 1980s	296
18	Foreign Investment	304
18.1	The Role of Foreign Investment	304
18.2	Historical Developments	306
18.3	The State of Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) as of 1999	307
18.4	Policies for the Regulation of Foreign Investment	310
18.5	Opportunities and Problems for Foreign Investors	312
18.6	How Attractive is China for Foreign Investment?	316
18.7	The Impact of WTO Membership on Foreign Investment	317
18.8	A Proposal to Increase Foreign Investment from Taiwan	318

Part V: Studies of Economic Institutions and Infrastructure	321
19 Use or Misuse of Assets	323
19.1 Introduction	323
19.2 Laws of Asset Management	325
19.3 Managing One's Own Person	328
19.4 Managing Physical Assets	330
19.5 Managing Collections of Assets under the Responsibility System	332
19.6 Concluding Comments	335
20 The Legal System and the Role of Government	338
20.1 The Legal System prior to 1949	338
20.2 The Legal System since 1949	340
20.3 The Role of the Legal System in a Market Economy	343
20.4 The Economic Role of Government	345
20.5 The Government's Decision Process	348
21 The Education System and Policy	352
21.1 The Education System prior to 1949	352
21.2 The Education System after 1949	353
21.3 Education Policy	354
21.4 Economics Education	357
21.5 Concluding Comments	365
22 Taking Stock and Looking Ahead	367
22.1 Taking Stock	367
22.2 Prospects for the Chinese Economy up to 2020	379
Conclusion: Lessons for the Study of Economic Transformation	386
Index	394