

How Statesmen Think The Psychology of International Politics

Robert Jervis

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS

PRINCETON AND OXFORD

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction 1

PART I. POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY 13

- 1 Understanding Beliefs 15
- 2 The Drunkard's Search 40

PART II. HEURISTICS AND BIASES 61

- 3 Representativeness, Foreign Policy Judgments, and Theory-Driven Perceptions 63
- 4 Prospect Theory: The Political Implications of Loss Aversion 85

PART III. POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY AND INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS THEORY 105

- 5 Signaling and Perception: Projecting Images and Drawing Inferences 107
- 6 Political Psychology Research and Theory: Bridges and Barriers 125
- 7 Why Intelligence and Policymakers Clash 148
- 8 Identity and the Cold War 169

PART IV. PSYCHOLOGY AND NATIONAL SECURITY 189

- 9 Deterrence and Perception 191
- 10 Psychology and Crisis Stability 216

viii CONTENTS

- 11 Domino Beliefs 234
- 12 Perception, Misperception, and the End of the Cold War 261
- Index 281