

THE RISE OF EARLY MODERN SCIENCE

Islam, China, and the West

Third Edition

TOBY E. HUFF

Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of Figures and Tables	page vii
Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xii
PART I	I
Introduction	3
1 The Comparative Study of Science	10
2 Arabic Science and the Islamic World	53
3 Philosophy, Science, and Civilizational Configurations	76
4 The European Legal Revolution	III
5 Madrasas and the Transmitted Sciences	140
6 Universities and the Institutionalization of Science	172
PART II	201
7 Science and Civilization in China	203
8 Education, Examinations, and Neo-Confucianism	236
Appendix 1: Anatomy, and Post-mortems in China	255
9 Poverties and Triumphs of Chinese Science	258
Appendix 2: Books and Essays on Western Science and Astronomy Translated into Chinese by the Jesuits	288

PART III	291
10 The Rise of Modern Science	293
Epilogue – Science, History, and Development	325
Select Bibliography	334
Index	376