

SRITAI CONSTITUTIONAL FUTURE

Stephen Haseler • Richard Holme

Lord Hunt of Tanworth

David King • Graham Mather

Gerard Radnitzky

Richard Rose • Frank Vibert

Introduction by

Frank Vibert

o

Institute of Economic Affairs

1991

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	Frank Vibert	vii
1. THE SOCIAL MARKET AND THE CONSTITUTION OF LIBERTY	Gerard Radnitzky	1
1. Introduction		1
2. The Social Market		2
3. The Constitution of Liberty		9
4. The Durability of the Constitution		11
5. Other Means of Keeping Society on the Road to Freedom		13
2. CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM IN THE UNITED KINGDOM: AN INCREMENTAL AGENDA	Frank Vibert	15
1. The Revival of Constitutional Reform Proposals		15
2. Legitimacy of Authority		20
3. The Exercise of Authority		23
4. The Role of the State		29
5. The Domain of Governance		31
6. The Case for a Written Constitution		34
7. Conclusions		36
3. BRITAIN'S FEUDAL CONSTITUTION	Stephen Haseler	37
1. Introduction		37
2. The Arguments for Constitutional Change		39
3. The Constitutional Changes Required		40
4. Conclusions		43
4. THE POLITICAL ECONOMY OF CABINET CHANGE	Richard Rose	45
1. How Much Turnover?		47
2. Consequences of Turnover		57
3. Alternatives for Reform	*	61
TABLE 1: Turnover of Cabinet Ministers, 1964-91		47
FIGURES:
1. Average Tenure of Ministers: by Governing Party, 1964-91		49
2. Average Tenure of Ministers in Departments, 1964-91		50
3. Average Duration in Office of Cabinet Ministers in Europe, 1945-84		53
4. Parliamentary Experience of Cabinet Ministers in Europe, 1945-84		55
5. GOVERNMENT BY CONTRACT	Graham Mather	73
Introduction		73
End of Traditional Public Service		74
Empowerment and Classlessness		75
Future Trends in Government Scale and Organisation		77
Drawing the Dividing Line Between Public and Private Provision		80
Remedies and Public Provision		82
Decision-Making Procedures		85
Reducing Administrative and Regulatory Discretion		86

Britain's Constitutional Future

Contract Model		87
APPENDIX 1: Executive Agencies Established as at 1 October 1991		90
APPENDIX 2: Next Steps—Activities Announced by Departments as Under Consideration for Agency Status (as at 1 October 1991)		92
6. THE CABINET AND 'NEXT STEPS'	Lord Hunt of Tanworth	95
Evolution of Cabinet Committees		96
'Next Steps': The Role of Executive Agencies		96
Ministerial Control		97
Code of Practice for Agencies		98
'A New Kind of Guidance and Monitoring'		99
7. LOCAL GOVERNMENT TAXATION:
THE LOGIC OF A LOCAL INCOME TAX	David N. King	101
Twenty Years of Concern With Local Government Finance		101
The Localist and Centralist Approaches		102
A Middle Way?		105
The Localist Approach and Economic Control		106
Financing the Centralist Approach		108
Financing the Localist Approach		108
Tax Rates on the Localist Approach		110
Financing a Middle Way		111
Reducing the Scope of Local Government		113
Conclusion: The Need for a Local Income Tax		113
References		114
TABLE 1: OECD Countries, 1988: (A) State and Local Tax Yields as a Percentage of GDP; (B) GNP Per Head		103
8. ELECTORAL REFORM:
WHAT ARE THE CONSEQUENCES?	Richard Rose	115
1. For Responsible Government, Vote First-Past-The-Post		118
2. For a Fully Representative Parliament, Vote Proportional Representation		122
3. Different Horses for Different Courses?		129
4. Principles and Practice		132
NOTE 1: Types of Electoral Systems		135
NOTE 2: A Note on Sources		136
FIGURE 1: Relation of Seats and Votes: UK General Election, 1987		121
TABLE 1: Disproportionality in Election Outcomes		124
9. ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL LIBERALISM	Richard Holme	137
Economic and Political Liberalism: The Close Connection		138
The British Constitution: Inflexibility of History and Tradition		139
Markets Are Driven by Choice		140
The Problem of Governmental Secrecy		141
An Open, Fair and Consumer-Led Market-Place		142
Central and Local Government—A Morass		143
THE AUTHORS		145