

Hugo Grotius

On the Law of War and Peace

Edited and annotated by

STEPHEN C. NEFF

fig CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Preface	page xi
List of abbreviations	xii
Introduction	xiii
A life in turbulent times	xiii
The intellectual world of Hugo Grotius	xxi
Grotius the natural lawyer	xxiv
Grotius the political theorist	xxviii
Grotius the international lawyer	xxxii
Note on the text	xxxvi
Prologue	1
BOOK I
1 What is war? What is law?	23
2 Whether it is ever lawful to wage war	34
3 Distinction between public and private war; explanation of sovereignty (summi imperii)	43
4 War of subjects against superiors	68
5 Who may lawfully wage war	77
BOOK II
1 The causes of war: first, defence of self and property	81
2 Of things which belong to men in common	92
3 Of original acquisition of things, with special reference to the sea and rivers	105

4	On assumed abandonment of ownership and occupation consequent thereon; and wherein this differs from ownership by usucaption and by prescription	n6
5	On the original acquisition of rights over persons. Herein are treated the rights of parents, marriage, associations, and the rights over subjects and slaves	124
6	On secondary acquisition of property by the act of man; also, alienation of sovereignty and of the attributes of sovereignty	138
7	On derivative acquisition of property which takes place in accordance with law; and herein, intestate succession	144
8	On acquisitions commonly said to be by the law of nations	159
9	When sovereignty or ownership ceases	170
10	On the obligation which arises from ownership	177
11	On promises	186
12	On contracts	202
13	On oaths	215
14	On promises, contracts, and oaths of those who hold sovereign power	222
15	On treaties and sponsions	232
16	On interpretation	238
17	On damage caused through injury, and the obligation arising therefrom	252
18	On the right of legation	260
19	On the right of sepulchre	267
20	On punishments	269
21	On the sharing of punishments	292
22	On unjust causes [of wars]	301
23	On doubtful causes of war	307
24	Warnings not to undertake war rashly, even for just causes	311
25	On the causes of undertaking war on behalf of others	315
26	On just causes for war waged by those who are under the rule of another	319

BOOK III

1	General rules from the law of nature regarding what is permissible in war; with a consideration of ruses and falsehood	325
2	How by the law of nations the goods of subjects may be held for the debt of their rulers; and therein, on reprisals	338
3	On war that is lawful or public according to the law of nations; and therein, on the declaration of war	343
4	On the right of killing enemies in a public war, and on other violence against the person	349
5	On devastation and pillage	357
6	On the right of acquiring things taken in war	359
7	On the right over prisoners of war	368
8	On the right to rule over the conquered	374
9	On postliminy	376
10	Cautions in regard to things which are done in an unlawful war	384
11	Moderation with respect to the right of killing in a lawful war	387
12	Moderation in laying waste and similar things	394
13	Moderation in regard to captured property	398
14	Moderation in regard to prisoners of war	402
15	Moderation in the acquisition of sovereignty	406
16	Moderation in regard to those things which by the law of nations have not the right of postliminy	408
17	On those who are of neither side in war	411
18	On acts done by individuals in a public war	413
19	On good faith between enemies	418
20	On the good faith of states, by which war is ended; also on the working of peace treaties, on decision by lot, on combat by agreement; on arbitration, surrender, hostages, and pledges	426
21	On good faith during war; herein also concerning a truce, the right of safe-conduct, and the ransom of prisoners	449
22	On the good faith of subordinate powers in war	460
23	On good faith of private persons in war	466

24	On implied good faith	472
25	Conclusion, with admonitions on behalf of good faith and peace	474
	Appendix 1	477
	Appendix 2	481
	Further reading	488
	Index of names	490
	Subject index	493