

Rural Poverty, Risk and Development

Marcel Fafchamps

Department of Economics and Mansfield College, University of Oxford, UK

Edward Elgar

Cheltenham, UK • Northampton, MA, USA

Contents

List of	figures	vii
Preface	,	ix
1	Introduction	1
2	Risk and poverty	5
2.1	Life and risk	5
2.2	Risk in poor rural economies	8
3	The risk coping strategies of the rural poor	12
3.1	Reducing exposure to shocks	13
3.2	Saving and liquidating assets	21
3.3	Risk sharing	32
3.4	Allocation of scarce resources within the household	55
4	The limits to risk coping	58
4.1	The limits to self-protection	58
4.2	Risk sharing, self-interest, and commitment failure	65
4.3	Sharing and power	80
4.4	Risk sharing and credit	90
4.5	Information asymmetries	96
4.6	Risk sharing networks	103
4.7	The breakdown of the solidarity system	106
4.8	Conclusion	108
5	Risk and inequality	109
5.1	A stylized economy	111
5.2	No marketable assets	113
5.3	Accumulation with no risk sharing	116
5.4	Accumulation and risk sharing	129
5.5	Imperfect commitment	133
5.6	Risk and poverty trap	136
5.7	Conclusion	143
6	Risk and development	146

6.1	Nutrition and human capital	146
6.2	Risk and technological innovation	151
6.3	Commercial crops vs. subsistence farming	162
6.4	Precautionary saving and investment constraints	176
6.5	Risk sharing and risk taking	188
7	Conclusion	196
7.1	What we have learned	196
7.2	What we do not know	202
7.3	What local governments can do	206
7.4	What the international community can do	210
	Notes	213
	Appendix	221
	Bibliography	227
	Index	257