

GERMAN DEVELOPMENT INSTITUTE

Brazil: Pacing the Challenge of Competitiveness

Jörg Meyer-Stamer

Reports and Working Papers 3/1995

Table of Contents

	Foreword and Summary	I
I	GOVERNANCE IN THE POST-IMPORT SUBSTITUTION ERA: PERSPECTIVES FOR NEW APPROACHES TO CREATE SYSTEMIC COMPETITIVENESS
1	Introduction	1
2	Brazil: The end of import Substitution and the erosion of governance eapability	2
3	New governance structures to foster industrial competitiveness—general considerations	5
3.1	Rising demands on governance on the meso-level	8
3.2	Governance for industrial competitiveness: demands on the meta-level	10
3.3	New forms of governance	11
4	Systemic competitiveness: a realistic perspective for Brazil?	13
4.1	The disarticulation between the executive and the legislative branch of central government	13
4.2	The persistence of traditional corporatist structures	14
4.3	Mistrust between firms and government	15
4.4	The high level of disorganization in the public bureaucraey	15
4.5	The absence of a national System of innovation	16
4.6	Deficiencies in policy-making on the local and State level	17
4.7	Why systemic competitiveness may emerge nevertheless	18
II	NEW DEPARTURES FOR TECHNOLOGY POLICY
1	Introduction	20
2	Why there is no national system of innovation in Brazil	20
3	Technology policy in Brazil: Old approaches to a new Situation	23
3.1	Fiscal incentives	23

3.2	University-company links	24
3.3	Implicit vs. explicit technology policy	25
3.4	Some questionable assumptions of the Brazilian technology policy discussion	26
4	New approaches to technology policy	28
4.1	Framework conditions for technology policy	28
4.2	Specific measures	29
III	COMPREHENSIVE MODERNIZATION ON THE SHOP-FLOOR: A CASE STUDY ON THE MACHINERY INDUSTRY IN BRAZIL
1	Introduction	31
1.1	Comprehensive modernization: the Brazilian experience so far	32
1.2	Structural features of Brazil 's machinery industry	33
1.3	Research design	35
2	Results of the field survey: technical innovations	36
2.1	Computer-aided automation technologies in the production process	36
2.2	The diffusion of computerized material resources planning Systems	37
3	Results of the field survey: organizational innovations	38
3.1	Internal just-in-time (JIT)	38
3.1.1	Findings in the machinery sector	8
3.1.2	Findings in the equipment sector	40
3.2	The organization of quality	40
4	Summary of findings	41
	Bibliography	45

Figures

Figure 1: Determinants of Systemic competitiveness	6
Figure 2: R&D Expenditures by Major Executing Agency	22
Figure 3: Companies' Positions On Internal Just-in-Time	39
Figure 4: Structure of the Sample in Terms of Modernization Strategies	42