

Budget System Reform in Emerging Economies

The Challenges and the Reform Agenda

Jack Diamond

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

Washington DC

2006

Contents

Abbreviations and Acronyms	vi
Preface	vii
I Overview	I
II The Strategy for Budget System Reform in Emerging Market Economies	3
Stages in Budget System Development	3
A Three-Track Path to Reform	4
The Steps toward Reform	7
Three Preconditions for Reform	9
Institutional Framework for Devolved Management	12
Managing the Change Process	13
The Wider Framework for Budget Reform	13
Is There Need for a New Legal Framework?	14
III Moving from Program to Performance Budgeting	17
The Road from Old to New Performance Budgeting	17
Issues of Design in a Program Structure	21
The Wider Strategic Framework for the Program Structure	23
Introducing Medium-Term Budget Frameworks	24
IV Introducing a Performance Management Framework	31
Different Measures of Performance	31
Defining a Framework for Performance Measurement	33
Experience in Using Performance Measures	36
Guidelines for Using Performance Measures	38
Establishing a Performance Information System	39
Developing a Performance Management System	40
Concluding Remarks	43
V Establishing Basic Public Expenditure Management Thresholds	44
Internal Control Systems	44
Internal Audit	45
Financial Management Information Systems	49
Costing Systems	52
Assessing the Performance of the Budget System	54
Concluding Remarks	55

VI	Moving from Cash to Accrual Accounting	57
	Cash Versus Accrual Accounting	57
	Accounting Models for Different Management Needs	59
	Accrual Accounting as a Component of Wider Budget System Reform	61
	Preconditions for the Move to Accrual Accounting	64
	A Five-Stage Transition to Accrual Accounting	65
	Preliminary Guidance for Accrual Accounting	68
	The GFSM 2001 Standard for Fiscal Reporting	70
	Concluding Remarks	73
VII	The Institutional Framework for Budget System Reform	75
	The Impetus for Performance Budgeting	75
	Different Approaches to Less-Centralized Budget Management	75
	The Five Ds in Practice	77
	Concluding Remarks	88
VIII	Managing the Reform Process	90
	What Can Be Learned from the OECD Experience?	90
	The Overall Approach to Reform	91
	Elements of a Reform Strategy	92
	Providing an Enabling Environment	98
	The Need for a Compatible Legal and Regulatory Framework	100
	The Key Lessons for Budget Reform	101
	Concluding Remarks	103
	References	104
	Boxes
	1. Pros and Cons of a Traditional Line-Item Budget	4
	2. OECD Practices: Flexibility in Budget Management	5
	3. Russian Budget System Reforms	7
	4. Chinese Budget Reforms: Strengthening Basic PEM Systems	10
	5. Major Types of Fiscal Policy Rules	14
	6. Summary of Good Practices in Institutional Transparency	15
	7. Elements of the Brazilian Fiscal Responsibility Law, 1999	15
	8. The Steps toward the “New” Performance Budgeting	18
	9. OECD Practices: Use of a Program Structure	21
	10. The U.S. Government’s Program Assessment Rating Tool (PART)	22
	11. Limitations of a “Bottom-Up” Planning Process	23
	12. Connecting Planning with Budgeting	25
	13. OECD Practices: Use of MTBFs	26
	14. Process for Agreeing on Program Budget Format	28
	15. General Guidelines on the Design of Programs	29
	16. Desirable Properties of Outputs	34
	17. Desirable Properties of Outcomes	34
	18. Typical Service Quality Characteristics	35
	19. OECD Practices: Use of Performance Information	36
	20. The U.K. Government’s Public Service Agreement (PSA) Framework	39
	21. Key Principles for Reporting Performance Information	40
	22. Elements of the Strategic Plan	41