Making the Transition to E-Learning:

Strategies and Issues

Mark Bullen
British Columbia Institute of Technology, Canada

Diane P. Janes
University of Saskatchewan, Canada

Information Science Publishing

Hershey • London • Melbourne • Singapore

Making the Transition to E-Learning:

Strategies and Issues

Table of Contents

Preface vii

Section I: Institutional and Conceptual Issues

Chapter I
E-Learning as Nation Building 1
Marco Adria, University of Alberta, Canada
Katy Campbell, University of Alberta, Canada

Chapter II
Organizational Models for Faculty Support: The Response of Canadian Universities 17
Margaret Haughey, University of Alberta, Canada

Chapter III
Moving to Blended Delivery in a Polytechnic: Shifting the Mindset of Faculty and Institutions 33
Oriel Kelly, Manukau Institute of Technology, New Zealand

Chapter IV
Strategic Planning for E-Learning in a Polytechnic 47
Tony Bates, Tony Bates Associates, Ltd., Canada

Chapter V
Using E-Learning to Promote Excellence in Polytechnic Education 66
Maggie Beers, British Columbia Institute of Technology, Canada

Chapter VI
Teaching and Learning in a Laptop Nursing Program: Institutional and Pedagogical Issues 84
Ellen Vogel, University of Ontario, Canada
Bill Muirhead, University of Ontario, Canada

Section II: Learning and Teaching Issues

Chapter VII
E-Learning in Higher Education: The Need for a New Pedagogy 104
Dirk Morrison, University of Saskatchewan, Canada

Chapter VIII
New Skills and Ways of Working: Faculty Development for E-Learning 121
Gail Wilson, University of Western Sydney, Australia

Chapter IX
Using E-Learning to Transform Large Class Teaching 139
Cathy Gunn, University of Auckland, New Zealand
Mandy Harper, University of Auckland, New Zealand

Chapter X
The Continuing Struggle for Community and Content in Blended Technology Courses in Higher Education 157
Richard A. Schwier, University of Saskatchewan, Canada
Mary E. Dykes, University of Saskatchewan, Canada

Chapter XI
Toward Effective Instruction in E-Learning Environments 173
Martha A. Gabriel, University of Prince Edward Island, Canada

Chapter XII
The Plain Hard Work of Teaching Online: Strategies for Instructors 191
Dianne Conrad, Athabasca University, Canada

Chapter XIII
Empowering Learners to Interact Effectively in Asynchronous Discussion Activities 208
Helen Wozniak, University of Sydney, Australia

Chapter XIV
A Framework for Choosing Communication Activities in E-Learning 229
Tannis Morgan, University of British Columbia, Canada
Karen Belfer, British Columbia Institute of Technology, Canada

Chapter XV
Using Problem-Based Learning in Online Courses: A New Hope? 243
Richard F. Kenny, Athabasca University, Canada

Section III: Instructional Design and Technology Issues

Chapter XVI
Fast Prototyping as a Communication Catalyst for E-Learning Design 266
Luca Botturi, University of Lugano, Switzerland
Lorenzo Cantoni, University of Lugano, Switzerland
Benedetto Lepori, University of Lugano, Switzerland
Stefano Tardini, University of Lugano, Switzerland

Chapter XVII
Educational Design as a Key Issue in Planning for Quality Improvement 284
Albert Sangrà, Open University of Catalonia, Spain
Lourdes Guàrdia, Open University of Catalonia, Spain
Mercedes González-Sanmamed, University of Coruña, Spain

Chapter XVIII
Cognitive Tools for Self-Regulated E-Learning 300
Tracey L. Leacock, Simon Fraser University, Canada
John C. Nesbit, Simon Fraser University, Canada

Chapter XIX
Adopting Tools for Online Synchronous Communication: Issues and Strategies 318
Elizabeth Murphy, Memorial University of Newfoundland, Canada
Thérèse Laferrière, Laval University, Canada

Chapter XX
Knowledge is PowerPoint: Slideware in E-Learning 335
Adnan Qayyum, Concordia University, Canada
Brad Eastman, University of British Columbia, Canada

About the Authors 350

Index 361