

Popular Geopolitics and Nation Branding in the Post-Soviet Realm

Robert A. Saunders

Contents

List of figures	viii
List of tables	ix
Acknowledgments	x
Introduction: [Not] made in the USSR	1
1 Of idols and idylls: The question of national image	13
2 The supermarket of nations: Competitive identity and the brand state	44
3 The mind's eye: Popular culture, geographical imagination, and international relations	71
4 A brand new Eurasia: Places, spaces, and peoples of the post-Soviet realm	101
5 The post-Soviet bogeyman: A guide to the dangerous personae of the former USSR	131
6 Laughable nations: Parodying the post-Soviet republics	159
7 Mapping Trashcanistan: The post-Soviet badlands in popular culture, news media, and academe	184
8 Branded!: Marketing Eurasia's new nations to the (Western) world	213
Conclusion: Post-Soviet Eurasia: The once and future geopolitical imaginary	251
Index	259