

STRATEGIC INTERACTION AND MARKETS

JEAN J. GABSZEWICZ

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

CONTENTS

1 Introduction

From perfect to imperfect competition	5
-2.1 Barriers to entry and collusion	5
2.1.1 The assumption of an atomistic market	5
2.1.2 Barriers to entry as an obstacle to competition	8
2.1.3 Collusion as an obstacle to competition	9
2.2 Product differentiation	11
2.2.1 The assumption of a homogeneous product	11
2.2.2 How to differentiate one's product	13
2.2.3 Demand structure and product differentiation	14
2.2.4 Product differentiation, market structure and entry	16
2.3 Imperfect information as an obstacle to competition	18
2.3.1 The assumption of perfect information	18
2.3.2 The consequences of imperfect information	20
2.4 Imperfect competition and game theory	23
2.4.1 Cooperation versus non-cooperation	23
2.4.2 Market structures	26
The number of agents: entry, barriers to entry and collusion	30
3.1 Entry and strategic competition	30
3.1.1 A small number of sellers: Monopoly and duopoly	30
3.1.2 Strategic entry	33
3.2 Barriers to entry and competition	35
3.2.1 The theory of limit pricing	35
3.2.2 The role of investment as a barrier to entry	37
3.2.3 Dynamic limit pricing	39
3.3 Collusion and competition	40
3.3.1 The difficulties of coordination	40
3.3.2 The stability of collusive agreements	43
Product differentiation	46
4.1 Monopoly and product differentiation	46
4.1.1 Selecting the product line	46
4.1.2 Quality selection	47
4.2 Duopoly and product differentiation	49
4.2.1 Horizontal product differentiation	49

4.2.2	Vertical product differentiation	•	52
4.3	Entry in a differentiated market		56
4.3.1	Entry under horizontal product differentiation		58
4.3.2	Entry under vertical product differentiation		60
5	Imperfect information		63
5.1	Imperfect information about prices		63
5.2	Imperfect information about quality	.	68
6	Imperfect competition and general equilibrium		72
6.1	The cooperative approach		72
6.1.1	The core of an exchange economy		72
6.1.2	The core and the set of competitive allocations		75
6.1.3	The core and imperfect competition		79
6.2	The non-cooperative approach		81
7	Conclusion	'	85
	References		88
	Index		90