

GEOGRAPHY

History and Concepts

A Student's Guide

THIRD EDITION

ARILD HOLT-JENSEN

University of Bergen

English adaptation and translation

BRIAN FULLERTON

University of Newcastle upon Tyne

SAGE Publications

London • Thousand Oaks • New Delhi

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xv
1 WHAT IS GEOGRAPHY?	1
Exploration and the cosmographic tradition	2
A science of synthesis	2
The organizational plan of geography	10
A new synthesis?	11
2 THE FOUNDATION OF GEOGRAPHY	17
Geography in the ancient world	17
Middle Ages and the Renaissance	19
Varenus	22
The philosopher, Immanuel Kant	23
The 'classical' period	25
From cosmography to an institutionalized discipline	28
The social anarchists	34
Darwinism	37
Geomorphology and physiography provide academic respect	40
Environmental determinism and possibilism	42
The French school of regional geography	45
Landscapes and regions	48
Regional studies in Britain	53
The development of applied geography	54
3 PARADIGMS AND REVOLUTIONS	57
Kuhn's paradigms	58
Critics of Kuhn	61
Induction, deduction and abduction	62
Changing paradigms in geography?	69
An idiographic or nomothetic science?	72
Absolute and relative space	73
A discipline ripe for change	76
The growth of spatial science	77

What kind of revolution?	82
Critics of the spatial science school	86
The achievements of spatial science	87
A 'critical' revolution?	91
A new humanistic geography	94
Spatial science criticized from within	96
Revolution or evolution?	97
4 POSITIVISM AND ITS CRITICS	99
Positivism and critical theory	99
The development of positivism	100
Principles in positivism	102
Criticisms of positivism	103
Dialectics, Hegel and Marx	105
Subjectivity and objectivity	106
Practical consequences for research	110
Geography and empiricism	113
The positivism of spatial science	115
Humanistic approaches	117
Structuralism	122
Structuration theory	124
Realism	127
A simplified model of relations between the empirical, agents and structures	132
Postmodernism and poststructuralism	133
To unite a vernacular and an academic definition of geography	139
5 PROCESSES IN SPACE AND PLACE	145
Geography at the turn of the millennium: action and processes in space	145
Relational space	147
Region and place	153
A sense of place	158
Territoriality and 'otherness'	167
Geographies of exclusion	171
Geographical futures	175
Geography as human ecology	177
Geographical information systems (GIS) and ways of representing the world	180
From orthodoxy to pluralism	185
Explanation and description	187
Are dichotomies overemphasized?	188
'Let one hundred flowers bloom'	189
Specialization and pluralism	191
References and Bibliography	197
Author and Personality Index	209
Glossary and Subject Index	216