ASEAN and China: Towards A Harmonious Relationship	xvii
Part I	1
China-ASEAN Relations: A Key to the Region's Stability and Prosperity	3
Mr Gan Kim Yong, Minister of State for Education and Manpower Some major achievements in ASEAN-China relations in recent years have contributed to the strengthening of this bilateral relationship.
Further Enhancing ASEAN-China Relations	6
H. E. Mr Ong Keng Yong, ASEAN Secretary-General The multi-dimensional cooperation that China and ASEAN enjoyed is an important factor for the maturing of China-ASEAN relations.
Overcoming Obstacles in ASEAN-China Relations	11
H.E. Mr Jusuf Wanandi, Centre for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), Indonesia The close partnership between ASEAN and China could be easily derailed if either side failed to oblige to their agreements. Both sides also need to expand their socio-cultural cooperation.
Part II: Political and Security Dimensions	15
China's Evolving Relations with Southeast Asia: Domestic and Strategic Factors	17
Dr Lai Hongyi, East Asian Institute, Singapore This paper provides a comprehensive overview of ASEAN-China relations from the mid 1960s to the present. It argues that China's peaceful rise and its relationship with ASEAN are integral to China's economic reform and development.

- China's Peaceful Rise and Its Political and Security Implications for Southeast Asia 36
Dr Sheng Lijun, Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, Singapore
Careful deconstruction of China's trade and investment ties with ASEAN reveals that Chinese influence in the region is actually minimal.
- China-Myanmar Relations Since 1988 49
Assoc Prof Li Chenyang, Institute of Southeast Asian Studies,
Yunnan University, Kunming
As a response to Western criticism, this paper presents a multi-dimensional and thorough investigation of the controversial China-Myanmar relationship.
- Vietnam-China Relations: Present and Future 65
Dr Do Tien Sam, Institute of Chinese Studies, Vietnamese
Academy of Social Sciences, Hanoi
This paper describes and analyses the achievements and issues in Vietnam-China relations since the normalisation of bilateral relations in 1991. It also provides a number of opinions on the prospect of relationship in the coming years.
- Discussion Papers*
- ASEAN-China Relations: Indonesia's Perspective 78
Dr Ignatius Wibowo Wibisono, Centre for Chinese Studies,
University of Indonesia, Jakarta
Despite the warming of ties between ASEAN and China, Indonesia remains sceptical about the future motives and intention of China.
- China's Rise and Partnership with ASEAN 87
Assoc Prof Wang Yan, Foreign Affairs Office, China Foreign Affairs University, Beijing
Noting that some countries are concerned about China's rise, this paper shows how Beijing tried to quell these fears by assessing China's "peaceful development" foreign policy.
- ASEAN-China Relations and Development of East Asian Regionalism 92
Assoc Prof Zhang Zhenjiang, Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, Jinan University, Guangzhou
The burgeoning China-ASEAN relationship helps to speed up the construction of an East Asian community.

China's Rise and Its Implications for Mainland Southeast Asia and Laos	98
Mr Bounnheuang Songnavong, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Vientiane, Laos
China's economic development is complementary to the peace and development of Mainland Southeast Asia.
Bilateral Relations Between China and Myanmar	101
Mr Aung Kyaw Oo, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Yangon, Myanmar
The close relationship between Myanmar and China is attributed to their increasing economic interdependency and regular political and socio-cultural exchanges.
Part III: Economic Relations	105
China's Economic Growth and Its Impact on the ASEAN Economies	107
Prof Lu Jianren, Institute of Asia-Pacific Studies, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, Beijing
China's growth has catalysed sustainable development in ASEAN economies and has helped increase the economic integration between ASEAN and China.
China-Singapore Investment Relations: New Development and Prospect	117
Assoc Prof Zhao Hong, Centre for Southeast Asian Studies, Xiamen University, Xiamen
While noting that Singapore is China's largest investor for the ASEAN region, the paper also discusses the areas that most Singapore companies are investing.
Singapore's Relations with China	130
Mr Teng Siow Song, East Asian Institute, Singapore
This paper offers an overview of Singapore-China relations after diplomatic contact was established in 1991. It shows how Singapore accommodates China's economic rise and explains why it has been so supportive of China's ASEAN-China Free Trade Area initiatives.
Discussion Papers
China-ASEAN Economic Relations: Progress and Prospects	139
Prof Liao Shaolian, Centre for Southeast Asian Studies, Xiamen University, Xiamen
The growing economic interdependency between ASEAN and China can be seen in the growing bilateral trade and investment activities.

Malaysia-China Relations: Looking Beyond Fears and Inadequacies Dr Stephen Leong , Institute of Strategic and International Studies, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia	145
How Malaysia overcame the "China threat" theory and expands its bilateral economic partnership is one way to look at the burgeoning Malaysia-China relations.
Philippines-China Relations: "Golden Age of Partnership" Prof Ellen Palanca , Ateneo de Manila University, Manila, Philippines	149
This paper studies the warming of ties between Philippines and China. It explains how both sides worked together in various fields to bring the relations to the present "golden age".
Managing China-Philippines Relations Through Dialogue Prof Shen Hongfang , Centre for Southeast Asian Studies, Xiamen University, Xiamen	155
This paper shows how China and Philippines were able to forge the present partnership by overcoming their political and economical differences.
