

A SENSE OF POWER

The Roots of America's Global Role

John A. Thompson

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction: The Problem	1
Power as an Explanation	4
Security as an Explanation	8
Economic Interests as an Explanation	16
Missionary Ideology as an Explanation	20
Seeking an Answer	22
1. A New Sense of Power	25
The Expansion of U.S. Foreign Policy	27
The Limits of Expansion	34
Explaining the Limitations	37
The Sense of Power	50
2. Advance and Retreat, 1914-1920	56
The European War and American Opinion	57
Wilson's Initial Policy	61
The Impact of the U-Boat	64
Increasing Involvement and Commitments	73
Going to War	79
Fighting the War and Preparing for Peace	87
The Limits of Power: The Paris Peace Conference	93
The Failure to Join the League of Nations	98
3. A Restrained Superpower, 1920-1938	110
The Character of U.S. Foreign Policy in the 1920s	111
The Apogee of Isolationism	132
4. Lessening Restraint, 1938-1941	151
The Erosion of Neutrality	156
The Impact of the Fall of France	166
Explaining the Move toward Involvement	172
5. Full-Scale Involvement, 1941-1945	193
Wielding Global Power	195
The Discrediting of "Isolationism"	204
What Kind of Internationalism?	216

6. Assuming "the Responsibilities of Power," 1945-1952	229
The Commitment to Western Europe	237
Doing More with More	259
Conclusion	275
Notes	285
Index	335