

China in the WOTM

Chinese Industry and International Sources of Reform in the Post-Mao Era

THOMAS G. MOORE

University of Cincinnati

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of Figures		page ix
List of Abbreviations		xi
Preface	i	xv
1	China as a Latecomer in World Industrial Markets	1
2	The Outside World as an Impetus for Change in China	34
3	Tailor to the World: China's Emergence as a Global Power in Textiles	59
4	Beating the System with Industrial Restructuring: China's Response to the Multifiber Arrangement (MFA)	80
5	China Looms Large: Reform and Rationalization in the Textile Industry	111
6	Industrial Change in the Shadow of the MFA: The Role of Top-Level Strategy, Mid-Level Intervention, and Low-Level Demand in China's Textile Industry	144
7	Chinese Shipbuilding: The Modest Origins of an Emerging Industrial Giant	163
8	Dangerous Currents: Navigating Boom and Bust Cycles in International Shipbuilding	192
9	Chinese Shipbuilding and Global Surplus Capacity: Making a Virtue out of Necessity	217
10	Market-Oriented Solutions for Industrial Adjustment: The Changing Pattern of State Intervention in Chinese Shipbuilding	238

Contents

11	Who Did What to Whom?: Making Sense of the Reform Process in China's Shipbuilding Industry	258
12	External Shocks, State Capacity, and National Responses for Economic Adjustment: Explaining Industrial Change in China	276
13	China in the Contemporary International Political Economy	295
	Appendix: Contours of the Research Effort	316
	Bibliography	322
	Index	333