

Democracy, Militarism, and
Nationalism in Argentina, 1930—1966

AN INTERPRETATION

By MARVIN GOLDWERT

PUBLISHED FOR THE INSTITUTE OF LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES
BY THE UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS PRESS, AUSTIN AND LONDON

CONTENTS

Prefacexi
Introduction. Approach, Hypotheses, and Terminology	xv
PART I. DEMOCRACY AND THE RISE OF MODERN MILITARISM, 1880-1930.	3
1. Developments within the Army Related to Institutional, Political, and Social Developments.	6
PART II. MILITARISM AND NATIONALISM, 1930-1946	31
2. The Army and the Politicians, 1930-1943	35
3. Social and Institutional Aspects of Argentine Militarism: A Hypothesis.	58
4. The Revolution of 1943 and the Rise of Colonel Juan D. Peron.	75
PART III. PERONISM AND THE ARMY, 1946-1955	95
5. The Army in the Peronist Structure, 1946-1951	100
6. The Move toward Totalitarianism: The Army and the Decline of Peronism, 1952-1955.	115
7. The Downfall of Peron, June 16-September 16, 1955	128
PART IV. THE LEGACY: A DIVIDED ARMY IN A DIVIDED NATION, 1955-1966.	141
8. Lonardi: Neither Victors nor Vanquished	156
9. Aramburu and the Liberal Nationalist Restoration, 1955-1958.	162
10. Frondizi: The Florentine on a Tightrope, 1958-1962	171
11. Guido, Illia, and Militarism Resurgent, 1962-1966	188

Postscript. A Guide to Current Politico-Military Crises	203
Bibliographical Essay.	211
Sources.	225
Index.	241