

Global Justice

Defending Cosmopolitanism

CHARLES JONES

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

CONTENTS

1. Distributive Justice and the International Context	1
1.1. Introduction	1
1.2. Distributive Justice: The Concept and its Scope	2
1.3. How to Argue for Principles of International Distributive Justice	9
1.4. The International Context	12
I. COSMOPOLITANISM	21
2. Utilitarianism and Global Justice	23
2.1. What is Utilitarianism?	23
2.2. The Implications of Utilitarianism for Global Justice	29
2.3. Two Objections to Utilitarianism	32
Is Utilitarianism Too Demanding?	33
Is Utilitarianism Too Permissive? History and Justice	39
2.4. Conclusion	48
3. Basic Human Rights: The Moral Minimum	50
3.1. Conceptual Preliminaries	52
3.2. Questions of Substance: Rights and Interests	56
3.3. The Human Right to Subsistence	58
3.4. Building a Case: Objections and Replies	62
The Negative-Positive Rights Distinction	62
Assigning Duties	66
Is Subsistence Sufficiently Important?	73
Side-Constraints	74
Overdemandingness	77
Is Rights-Talk Merely Egoism in Disguise?	80
3.5. Conclusion	83
4. O'Neill and the Obligations of Justice	85
4.1. Introduction	85
4.2. Taking Obligations Seriously: O'Neill's Maverick Kantianism	86
4.3. O'Neill's Critique of Rights-based Cosmopolitanism	92
4.4. Critique of O'Neillian International Distributive Justice	100
4.5. Conclusion	107

II. COMMUNITARIANISM	109
5. Patriotism and Justice	111
5.1. Introduction to Part II	111
5.2. Exclusionary Patriotism, Compatriot Favouritism, and Morality	112
5.3. Is Patriotism Consistent with Impartial Concern?	120
5.4. Compatriot Favouritism: Further Clarification	125
5.5. Compatriot Favouritism: For and Against	128
5.6. Patriotism and Global Justice	134
Alasdair MacIntyre and Inter-Community Conflict over Scarce Resources	134
George Fletcher, Patriotic Loyalty, and Justice	137
Bell, Rorty, Communitarianism, and Bounded Justice	143
5.7. Conclusion	148
6. Miller, Nationality, and Distributive Justice	150
6.1. Introduction	150
6.2. Miller's Characterization of Nationality	151
6.3. What Reasons are there for Persons to Value National Communities?	154
6.4. Objections to Conceiving Nationalities as Ethically Foundational	159
6.5. What Ethical Commitments Go Along with Allegiance to One's Nation?	164
6.6. Conclusion	170
7. Relativism, Universalism, and Walzer	173
7.1. Ethical Relativism	174
Cross-Cultural Variation and Relativism	174
Imposing Justice?	175
Some Implications of Relativism	175
7.2. Shared Understandings and Global Justice	176
7.3. Unjustified Moral Conservatism?	180
7.4. A Paradoxical Defence of Human Rights	182
7.5. Justice and Agreement	184
7.6. Universalist Constraints on Community Consensus	186
7.7. The Importance of Thinness	193
7.8. Is Justice Merely Negative?	196
7.9. Injustice and Past Intervention	197
7.10. Should We Defer to Thick Morality?	199
7.11. Conclusion	201

Contents

xiii

8. Neo-Hegelianism, Sovereignty, and Rights	203
8.1. What is Neo-Hegelian International Theory?	204
8.2. On the Value of the State	206
8.3. On the Community-Individual Relation	208
8.4. Frost and the Conflict of Settled Norms	210
8.5. The Ethical Relevance of Sovereignty	213
8.6. Sovereignty and Protection-Failure	217
8.7. Poverty, Human Rights, and State Sovereignty	222
8.8. Rejection of an Argument for the Necessity of a Society of States	223
8.9. Conclusion	226
Conclusion	227
Bibliography	235
Index	245