

Jaakko Aspara

MERGENCE AND TRANSLATIONS OF MANAGEMENT
INTERESTS IN CORPORATE BRANDING
IN THE FINNISH PULP AND PAPER CORPORATIONS

A STUDY WITH AN ACTOR-NETWORK THEORY APPROACH

HELSINKI SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS

ACTA UNIVERSITATIS OECONOMICAE HELSINGIENSIS

A-292

Table of Contents

Summary	i
Tiivistelma (suomeksi)	iv
Acknowledgements	vii
Table of Contents	viii
List of Tables	xv
List of Figures	xvi
PART I Introduction	1
1 Introduction	2
1.1 The Riddle	2
12 Marketing, corporate branding and B2B branding research	5
12.1 Branding and corporate branding research	6
122 Industrial or B2B branding research	8
123 Finnish P&P industry research	12
13 Actor-network theory (ANT) approach	13
13.1 What is ANT?	13
13.2 ANT approach to studying the riddle: Description in Parts III and IV	17
133 Level of commitment to ANT and compromises?	25
13.4 Further aspects of the position of the research in the ANT corpus	30
14 Contribution to marketing, corporate branding and B2B branding research: Research question	33
15 Structure of the Thesis	35
PART II Actor-Network Theory (ANT) Approach and Method	38
2 ANT as ontology	39
2.1 The heterogeneous network and semiotics of materiality	39
22 Performativity	41
22.1 Patterning of networks	41
222 Durability	46
3 ANT as way of studying and analysing	47
4 Method	51
4.1 Sources of data	52
4.1.1 Interviews	53
4.1.2 Documents and literature	59
42 Analysing the data and writing the description	60
42.1 Description in Part IV	61
422 Description in Part III	67
43 Validity, reliability	72
43.1 Descriptions based on the data, in general	73
432 Description in Part IV	74
433 Description in Part III	76
PART III Description: Management interests (in corporate branding) by the 2000s and at the moments of mergers and acquisitions	79
5 Start situation in the early 1980s: Aspects not taken for granted	80

5.1	Not taken for granted in the early 1980s: Shareholders, shareholder value, share price	82
5.2	Not taken for granted in the early 1980s: Differentiation in the market	87
5.3	Not taken for granted in the early 1980s: Selling own products	89
5.4	Not taken for granted in the early 1980s: International expansion	91
5.5	Not taken for granted in the early 1980s: Environmental responsibility issues	92
6	New management interests (in corporate branding) amidst black-boxing of the taken-for-granted by the early 2000s	96
6.1	Shareholders, shareholder value, share price	100
6.1.1	Restrictions to foreign credit capital removed - Dependence on domestic banks on capital decreasing	100
6.1.2	Mergers of individual P&P corporations within the capital spheres - Corporations becoming large	101
6.1.3	Risk concentrations of domestic banks and decreasing rivalry between the capital spheres	111
6.1.4	Restrictions to foreign ownership of Finnish corporations removed and corporate tax lowered	116
6.1.5	The corporations becoming increasingly large, Risk concentrations of domestic banks, and Decreasing rivalry between capital spheres	117
6.1.6	Foreign ownership increasing, Investor demands for shareholder value and share-price-based incentives	122
6.1.7	Foreign investors not very aware of the corporation as investment target - Emerging plans to list the corporation's share in foreign stock exchanges	125
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#1] Increasing investor awareness of the corporation as a paper and board company	125
6.1.13	Investor demands for fair treatment of minority shareholders and on Board composition - Dissolution of capital sphere influence	129
6.1.9	Investor demands for disclosure of information, for clear objectives and policies for financial, and for clear strategies	132
6.1.10	Investor demands for clear and focused product and business portfolio strategies	136
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#2] Communicating a clear and focused portfolio of core products and businesses to investors and analysts	137
6.1.11	Investors evaluating the corporation on strong brands owned	139
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#3] Emphasizing the corporation's brands to investors and analysts	140
6.1.12	Investors evaluating the corporation on dynamism and renewal	143
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#4] Signalling renewal to analysts and investors	143
6.2	Differentiation of products and Selling own products	145
6.2.1	Problems with the sales associations related to developing and promoting differentiated products	147
6.2.2	Attempts at marketing and producing differentiated products to be sold to direct customers	151
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#5] Developing and maintaining strong product brands (products sold to direct customers)	153
6.2.3	No sustainable competitive advantage by differentiating products	155
6.2.4	Attempts at marketing and producing differentiated products to be sold to customers via intermediaries	158
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#5 continued]] Developing and maintaining strong product brands (products sold also via merchants)	162
6.2.5	Attempts at marketing and producing differentiated products to be sold to consumer-like customers (offices)	165
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#5 (continued)] Developing and maintaining strong product brands (products sold via merchants also to office customers)	167
6.2.6	Intermediaries growing in size and demanding the possibility to sell commodity products with private label brands	170
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#5 (continued)] Developing and maintaining strong product brands (products sold via merchants)	174
6.2.7	Promotion of products incurring considerable costs	175

	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#5 (continued)] Developing and maintaining strong product brands and brand families	176
62.8	Attempts at marketing and producing differentiated products to be sold to consumers and households	179
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#5 (continued)] Developing and maintaining strong product brands and brand families (products sold also to consumers)	180
63	Selling own products and Differentiation beyond products	184
63.1	The corporation becoming large (production volumes and capacity, mills, wide product range)	184
63.2	Increasing customer demands for a wide product range - The corporation becoming large (wide product range)	186
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#6] Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of a wide product range rather than that of individual products	190
63.3	Increasing customer demands for delivery reliability-The corporation becoming large (production capacity, mills)	191
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#7] Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of large volume supply reliability rather than that of products	194
63.4	Dismantling of the sales associations and Criticism of sales cooperation by competition authorities	195
63.5	Customers not very aware of the corporation as a paper and board supplier	199
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#8] Increasing (direct) customer awareness of the corporation as a paper and board supplier	199
63.6	Increasing customer demands for service: shorter delivery times and smaller order sizes	201
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#9] Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of services rather than that of products (delivery times and order sizes)	206
63.7	Increasing customer demands for service: the possibility of joint development of customized products	207
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#9 (continued)] Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of services rather than that of products (joint RStD and tailoring)	209
63.8	Boundaries between standard grades blurring and Customers' increasingly specialized end-uses	210
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#10] Having employees adopt a way of working with initiative and a proactive customer-helping attitude	213
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#11] Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of solution help rather than that of products	214
6.4	International expansion	216
6.4.1	Local suppliers having an advantage in high demand growth market areas in China, Southeast Asia, Eastern Europe and the CIS	216
6.4.2	Local suppliers having an advantage in high demand market areas in Central and Western Europe and North America	218
6.4.3	Cheap recycled fibre available as raw material in Central and Western Europe and North America	219
6.4.4	Cheap short-fibre wood available as raw material in Southeast Asia and South America and the Pulp-paper-mill integration advantage	222
6.4.5	Cheap labour and energy available in Southeast Asia and South America	225
6.4.6	The corporation obtaining production capacity and selling more of production in new locations outside Finland and Europe	226
6.4.7	The corporation starting projects in developing countries	227
6.4.8	Customers and employees in the corporation's new production locations outside Finland and Europe not being very aware of the corporation	228
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#8 (continued)] Increasing (direct) customer awareness of the corporation as a paper and board supplier	228
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#12] Increasing potential employee awareness of the corporation	229
63	Environmental responsibility issues	231
65.1	Environmental friendliness becoming a concern to the corporation's customers and related criteria and images having an impact on business: "Chlorine-free" products and mills	231

652	Changing criteria for environment-friendliness: "Recycled" products besides the "chlorine-free"	236
653	Criteria for environment-friendliness coming to concern the whole supply chain and the behaviour of individual employees and units	239
65.4	No unequivocal measures for the new criteria of environmental responsibility	241
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#13] Communicating an image of the corporation's behaviour as environmentally responsible	243
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#14] Having employees adopt a way of working with an environmentally responsible attitude	246
655	The corporation accused of socially irresponsible behaviour in developing countries, No unequivocal measures, and Behaviour of individual employees and units	247
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#13 (continued)] Communicating an image of the corporation's behaviour as environmentally and socially responsible	249
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#14 (continued)] Having employees adopt a way of working with an environmentally and socially responsible attitude	251

6.6 Conclusion to Description in Chapter 6 253

7 Moments of mergers and acquisitions around the year 2000 and new management interests (in corporate branding) 255

7.1 New management interests (in corporate branding) at moments of M&As around the year 2000 256

7.1.1	The corporation coming to own numerous paper and board machines, producing similar products	256
7.1.2	The corporation starting to transfer control of production to division management	257
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#15(maa), particularly after M&As] Making (direct) customers indifferent of which mill produces the products	259
7.1.3	Problems emerging with the corporation's mills optimizing their own sales and with salespeople's and customers' difficulties with similar products from different mills	260
7.1.4	The corporation starting to transfer control of sales and marketing to division managers	261
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#16(m&a), particularly after M&As] Reducing salespeople and customer confusion, preventing cannibalization of sales, and eliminating competing promotion among the corporation's products	261
7.1.5	Mill and sales managers losing power, resisting changes, and suboptimizing	263
7.1.6	Managers and employees resisting change and suboptimizing at the sub-unit level, after individual mergers and acquisitions	263
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#17(m&a), particularly after M&As] Committing managers to corporate strategies and goals	265
	[management interest (in corporate branding) ml#18(m&a), particularly after M&As] Having employees identify themselves with and be proud of the corporation	266

12 Conclusion to Description in Chapter 7 267

PART IV Description: Translations of management interests to management practices of corporate branding 269

8 First phase of corporate branding 274

8.1 Management practices of corporate branding [mP's]: 1st phase 274

8.1.1	Having one brand name - that does not refer to a mill name - for the same product produced at different mills [mP#1]	274
8.1.2	Having products offered to a customer group or for an end use in a brand family [mP#2]	274

8.2 Translations of management interests to management practices of corporate branding [ml's-»mP's]: 1st phase 275

82.1	Making (direct) customers indifferent of which mill produces the products [ml#15(m&a)-»mP's]	275
82.2	Reducing salespeople and customer confusion, preventing cannibalization of sales, and eliminating competing promotion among the corporation's products [ml#16(m&a)-»mP's]	276
82.3	Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of a wide product range rather than that of individual products [ml#6->mP'sJ]	278
82.4	Communicating a clear and focused portfolio of core products and businesses to investors and analysts [ml#2->mP's]	280
82.5	Emphasizing the corporation's brands to analysts and investors [ml#3-^mP's]	281

82.6	Having employees identify themselves with and be proud of the corporation [ml#18(m&a)->mP's]	282
82.7	Developing and maintaining strong product brands and brand families [ml#5-^mP's]	283
82.8	Increasing (direct) customer awareness of the corporation as a paper and board supplier [ml#8->mP's]	284
83	Dissidence	289
9	Second phase of corporate branding	295
9.1	Management practices of corporate branding [mP's]: 2nd phase	295
9.1.1	Having core business brands and brand families in a corporate master brand family [mP#3]	295
9.1.2	Having core business units and sales offices under the corporate identity [mP#4]	295
9.2	Translations of management interests to management practices of corporate branding [ml's-nnP's]: 2nd phase	295
9.2.1	Developing and maintaining strong product brands and brand families [ml#5->mP's]	296
9.2.2	Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of a wide product range rather than that of individual products [ml#6->mP's]	297
9.2.3	Increasing (direct) customer awareness of the corporation as a paper and board supplier [ml#8->mP's]	298
9.2.4	Making (direct) customers indifferent of which mill produces the products [ml#15(m&a)->mP's]	301
9.2.5	Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of large volume supply reliability, of services, and of solution help rather than that of products [ml#7,ml#9,ml#11 ->mP's]	302
9.2.6	Having employees identify themselves with and be proud of the corporation [ml*18(m&a)->mP'sJ]	303
9.2.7	Increasing investor and potential employee awareness of the corporation [ml#1,ml#12->mP's]	305
9.2.8	Communicating a clear and focused portfolio of core products and businesses to investors and analysts [ml#2->mP's)	306
93	Dissidence	311
10	Negotiations to 1st and 2nd phases of corporate branding	315
10.1	Negotiated management practices of 1st and 2nd phases of corporate branding [mP's]	315
10.1.1	Having core business brands and brand families in a corporate master brand family based on visuality [mP#5]	315
10.1.2	Having products offered to a customer group or for an end use in sub-brand families based on visuality and grouping [mP#6]	316
10.1.3	Focusing promotion of products sold via intermediaries on few sub-brands and sub-brand families [mP#7]	317
10.2	Translations of management interests to management practices of corporate branding [ml's->mP's]: Negotiated 1 st and 2nd phases	317
10.3	Management interests Othered by corporate branding: 1st and 2nd phases after negotiations	331
10.3.1	Communicating differentiation of products to customers	331
10.3.2	Communicating differences in products sold to the same customers	332
10.3.3	Decreasing vulnerability to criticism and scandals around the corporation	333
10.3.4	Avoiding problems stemming from corporate name changes in case of mergers and acquisitions	334
10.3.5	Making customers' repeat purchases simple	334
10.3.6	Retaining local identification of employees	335
10.3.7	Maintaining (sales) alliances with other corporations	335
11	Third phase of corporate branding	337
11.1	Management practices of corporate branding [mP's]: 3rd phase	337
11.1.1	Defining values (identity) and slogans for the corporate brand [mP#8]	337
11.1.2	Communicating to and training employees about the defined corporate brand values and slogans [mP#9]	337
11.1.3	Introducing the corporate brand values with refined corporate name and visual identity [mP#10]	338
11.1.4	Continuously communicating about and according to the corporate brand values to employees and externally; using value feedback systems [mP#11]	338

112	Translations of management interests to management practices of corporate branding [ml's-nnP's]: 3rd phase	338
112.1	Committing management to corporate strategies and goals [ml#1 7(m&a)4mP's]	339
1122	Having employees identify themselves with and be proud of the corporation [ml#18(m&a)->mP's]	341
1123	Having employees adopt a way of working with initiative and a proactive customer-helping attitude AND Emphasizing to customers the corporation's offering of solution help rather than that of products [ml#10, ml#11 ->mP's]	343
112.4	Having employees adopt a way of working with environmentally and socially responsible attitude AND Communicating an image of the corporation's behaviour as environmentally and socially responsible [ml#14,ml#13->mP's]	348
1125	Signalling renewal to analysts and investors [ml#4->mP's]	351
113	Management interests Othered by corporate branding: 3rd phase	360
113.1	Communicating different offerings to different customers	360
1132	Communicating differentiation to customers	362
1133	Supporting existing business and sales of products	362
113.4	Maintaining existing management processes	363
1135	Maintaining credibility of top managers and objectives among employees	364
113.6	Managers' leaving visible signs of themselves and making changes to work done by preceding management	364
 PART V Findings, Conclusions, and Research Implications		369
12	Conclusion to ANT Description of Parts III and IV	370
13	Findings concerning research questions	373
13.1	Preconditions and management interests for corporate branding	373
13.1.1	Preconditions for corporate branding related to the taken-for-granted aspects and longer-term developments	373
13.1.2	Preconditions for corporate branding related to mergers and acquisitions around year 2000	380
132	Management practices of corporate branding, interests behind, and interests Othered	383
14	Discussion and Conclusions	389
14.1	Management practices of and interests in corporate branding	389
14.1.1	Management practices per se	389
14.1.2	Management interests per se	394
14.1.3	Translations of management interests to management practices	398
14.2	Managing different stakeholder relationships - Marketing the Corporation	403
14.2.1	Management of stakeholder relationships - Marketing also to investors and employees	403
14.2.2	Marketing to Customers: Long-term marketing and Othernesses	407
143	Power relations in management	410
143.1	Power of corporate marketing and communications managers and corporate head office growing	410
14.3.2	Managers with interests Othered	413
144	Matrix of management interests translated into management practices	414
15	Implications	417
15.1	Generalizability of the Findings and Conclusions	417
15.1.1	Validity of the Findings and Conclusions	417
15.1.2	Transferability of the Findings and Conclusions	418
152	Implications for further research: Subject phenomena	420
152.1	Similar corporations	420
152.2	Corporate branding	421
152.3	Marketing the corporation simultaneously to various stakeholders	423
152.4	Long-term marketing to customers while ensuring continuity of day-to-day business	425
153	Implications for further research: Use of ANT approach	425
153.1	Studying (fashionable) management practices	425
15.3.2	Using ANT approach in general	426
15.4	Implications for managers	428
15.4.1	Understanding the collective interest in corporate branding	428

15.42	Marketing the corporation simultaneously to various stakeholders	429
15.43	Long-term marketing to customers while ensuring continuity of day-to-day business	431
155	Summary of the contributions of the Thesis	432
References		436
	Theoretical sources	436
	Empirical sources	453
Appendix A: ANT in management and organization studies		464
Appendix B: ANT in management and organization studies (Table)		479
Appendix C: Interview details (Table)		484
Appendix D: Objectives in the analysis and in writing the description (continued)		488