

TRADE LIBERALIZATION AND POVERTY: A HANDBOOK

Neil McCulloch

Institute of Development Studies, Sussex

L Alan Winters

University of Sussex, Centre for Economic Performance, London School of Economics and CEPR, London

Xavier Cirera

Institute of Development Studies, Sussex

DFID Department for International Development

This Handbook is an output from a project funded by the UK Department for International Development (DfID) for the benefit of developing countries. The views expressed are not necessarily those of DfID or other parts of the UK Government.

Contents

List of Tables	xiii
List of Figures	xv
List of Boxes	xvii
Preface and Acknowledgements	xix
Executive Summary	xxi

PART 1 LINKING TRADE LIBERALIZATION AND POVERTY	1
1 About this Handbook	3
1.1 Why poverty matters	4
1.2 Why trade liberalization matters	5
1.3 Why the links matter	6
1.4 What economists bring to the debate	8
1.5 Main lessons	10
2 The Debate over Trade Liberalization	13
2.1 What is openness?	14
2.2 The costs and benefits of openness	15
2.2.1 Benefits of openness	15
2.2.2 Costs of openness	16
2.3 Openness, prices and competition	17
2.4 Openness, growth and technology	21
2.4.1 Openness and growth in theory	21
2.4.2 Openness and growth in practice	23
2.4.3 Pathways of influence	25
2.4.4 A tentative conclusion	26
2.5 Openness and volatility	27
2.5.1 Theoretical linkages	27
2.5.2 Empirical evidence	28
2.6 Openness and politics	30
2.6.1 Who are the players?	30
2.6.2 Why is protection the norm?	31
2.6.3 Why are trade restrictions used for protection rather than other means?	33
2.6.4 Implications for trade liberalization	34

3	Poverty and the Poor	37
3.1	What is poverty?	37
3.1.1	Sen's concept of poverty	38
3.1.2	The World Bank's concept of poverty	40
3.1.3	Lack of opportunity	40
3.1.4	Insecurity and vulnerability	40
3.1.5	Empowerment	43
3.2	Measuring poverty	44
3.2.1	Measures of income poverty	44
3.2.2	Participatory approaches	45
3.2.3	Classifying measures of poverty	46
3.2.4	Poverty or inequality?	49
3.3	The extent of poverty world-wide	50
3.4	Who are the Poor?	55
3.5	What causes poverty?	57
3.5.1	The interaction of endowments and shocks	59
4	Linking Trade Liberalization and Poverty: A Conceptual Framework	65
4.1	The individual and the household	67
4.1.1	A basic view of the household	67
4.1.2	Generalizing the basic view of the household	69
4.1.3	Distribution within the household	69
4.1.4	Adjusting to trade shocks	70
4.2	Price transmission	72
4.2.1	Direct effects through the distribution sector	72
4.2.2	Indirect effects and the domain of trade	74
4.3	Enterprises: profits, wages and employment	75
4.3.1	The elements of the enterprise sector	75
4.3.2	The 'trade' approach	77
4.3.3	The 'development' approach	78
4.3.4	Feedback from the enterprise to the price transmission channel	80
4.3.5	Adjustment by enterprises	80
4.4	Taxes and spending	80
4.5	Shocks, risks and vulnerability	84
4.6	Growth	86
5	Previous Approaches to Linking Trade and Poverty	89
5.1	The anti-monde and the role of theory	91
5.2	Descriptive and qualitative approaches	92
5.3	Data-based approaches	94
5.4	Modelling approaches	95
5.4.1	Partial versus general equilibrium	97
5.4.2	Modelling versus empirical work	97
5.4.3	Examples of modelling	98
5.5	Conclusions	99

Annex to Chapter 5	101
5.A.1 Household and community level modelling	101
5.A.2 National level modelling	103
5.A.2.1 Partial equilibrium models	103
5.A.2.2 General equilibrium models	104
5.A.3 Global level modelling	107
5.A.3.1 Partial equilibrium models	107
5.A.3.2 General equilibrium models	108
6 Implementing the Conceptual Framework	110
6.1 Trade reform	111
6.2 Enterprises	112
6.2.1 Production	116
6.2.2 Employment and wages	119
6.3 The distribution network	123
6.4 Government revenue and expenditure	128
6.5 Households	129
6.6 The domain of trade	133
7 Trade Reform and Anti-Poverty Policy	137
7.1 The impact of a poverty perspective on trade reform	138
7.1.1 Initial timing	138
7.1.2 Sequencing	140
7.1.3 Gradualism versus 'big-bang' reform	141
7.2 Anti-poverty programmes as complementary policies to trade reform	143
7.3 The impact of trade reform on anti-poverty programmes	145
7.4 Trade reform and short-term adjustment	146
7.4.1 How long does unemployment last?	147
7.5 Transitory and chronic poverty	148
7.6 Should the losers from trade reform be compensated?	150
7.6.1 Experience with compensation schemes in developed countries	152
7.7 Trade reform and Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers	153
7.8 Do international agreements constrain anti-poverty programmes?	156
7.8.1 The WTO Agreements and anti-poverty policies	156
7.8.2 Inconsistent international commitments and anti-poverty policy	158
7.9 Is reform optional?	159
PART 2 THE EFFECTS OF SPECIFIC LIBERALIZATIONS	163
8 Introduction to Part 2	165
8.1 The WTO trade agenda and beyond	165
8.2 Special and differential treatment	167
8.3 The chapter format of Part 2	169

9	Agricultural Trade Reform	171
9.1	Background	172
9.2	The economics of agricultural protection	174
9.2.1	Developed countries	174
9.2.2	Developing countries	175
9.3	The liberalization agenda in agriculture	176
9.3.1	The multilateral agenda	177
9.3.2	Developing countries	180
9.3.3	The cost of agricultural trade restrictions	181
9.3.4	The development box and food security	182
9.3.5	Sanitary and phyto-sanitary standards	183
9.3.6	Agricultural liberalization by other means	184
9.3.7	Regional trading arrangements	185
9.4	Agricultural liberalization and poverty	185
9.4.1	The pattern of net consumption	186
9.4.2	The impact of comparative advantage, social structures and policy	187
9.4.3	Institutional reform: marketing arrangements	188
9.4.4	Markets for inputs	190
9.4.5	Markets for credit and risk	190
9.4.6	Can the poor respond?	191
9.4.7	Agriculture's strong positive spillovers	191
9.5	The effects of liberalizing developing countries' trade policies on poverty	193
9.5.1	Tariff liberalization	193
9.5.2	National food security	194
9.5.3	Household food security	195
9.5.4	Reducing the anti-agriculture bias in developing countries	196
9.5.5	State trading: making developing country agricultural markets contestable	197
9.6	Developed country trade policies and poverty	198
9.6.1	Market access for temperate products	198
9.6.2	Market access for tropical products	200
9.6.3	Fish	200
9.6.4	Reductions in export subsidies and domestic support	201
9.6.5	Letting price signals work	202
9.7	Conclusion	203
	Annex to Chapter 9	205
10	Trade Related Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPs)	208
10.1	Background	208
10.2	The economics of TRIPs	210
10.2.1	The costs of protecting IPRs	210
10.2.2	The benefits of protecting IPRs	211
10.2.3	How much protection should be given to intellectual property?	212

10.2.4	Quantifying the costs and benefits of stronger IPRs	214
10.2.5	Public versus private knowledge	215
10.3	The current debate on IPRs	215
10.3.1	The TRIPs Agreement	216
10.3.2	Plant varieties	216
10.3.3	To renegotiate or not?	218
10.3.4	Extending protection to developing country interests	219
10.3.5	Weakening the scope of IPR protection	220
10.4	TRIPs and poverty	223
10.4.1	Growth and technology	223
10.4.2	Rents and prices	223
10.4.3	Fiscal dimensions	225
10.4.4	The enforcement of IPRs by developing countries	225
10.5	Conclusion	226
11	Trade in Services	229
11.1	Background	230
11.1.1	Modes of supply	230
11.1.2	Barriers to trade in services	231
11.2	The economics of services liberalization	233
11.2.1	The case for liberalization	233
11.2.2	Arguments against liberalization	234
11.2.3	The importance of competition and regulation	235
11.3	Services liberalization: the multilateral agenda	235
11.3.1	The GATS	236
11.3.2	Service negotiations in future	237
11.3.3	Special circumstances, not special and differential treatment	240
11.4	Services liberalization and poverty	240
11.4.1	The movement of natural persons	242
11.4.2	Financial services	246
11.4.3	Tourism	248
11.5	Conclusion	250
12	Liberalizing Manufacturing Trade	253
12.1	Background	253
12.2	The economics of trade restrictions on manufacturing	256
12.2.1	Tariffs	257
12.2.2	The Multi-Fibre Arrangement (MFA)	259
12.3	Progress on liberalizing trade in manufactures	260
12.3.1	Tariffs	260
12.3.2	The Agreement on Textiles and Clothing (ATC)	262
12.4	Manufacturing and poverty: multilateral liberalization and poor countries	263
12.5	Manufacturing and poverty: domestic liberalization and poor groups	265

12.5.1	Prices	265
12.5.2	Jobs	266
12.5.3	Government revenue	269
12.5.4	Growth	270
12.5.5	Ensuring that liberalization of trade in manufactures is pro-poor	271
12.6	Conclusion	273
13	Export and Domestic Subsidies	275
13.1	Background	275
13.2	The economics of subsidies	277
13.2.1	The price effects of subsidies and the possibility of WTO complaints	277
13.2.2	Factor markets	278
13.2.3	Domestic distortions	279
13.2.4	Technology and growth	280
13.2.5	Government revenue and expenditure	280
13.2.6	Shocks and vulnerability	282
13.2.7	The problem of administering subsidies	282
13.3	Subsidies in the Uruguay Round	283
13.3.1	Prohibited subsidies	283
13.3.2	Actionable subsidies	284
13.3.3	Consumption and factor subsidies	284
13.4	Possible negotiating issues	284
13.5	Subsidies and poverty	285
13.5.1	Direct effects	286
13.5.2	Systemic effects	288
13.5.3	Trade effects: developed country subsidies	288
13.5.4	Administering anti-subsidy policies	289
13.6	Conclusion	289
14	Anti-dumping	292
14.1	Background	292
14.2	The economics of anti-dumping	293
14.3	Anti-dumping today	297
14.3.1	The Uruguay Round Agreement on Anti-Dumping	297
14.3.2	Prospects for limiting anti-dumping	298
14.4	Anti-dumping and poverty	299
14.4.1	Developed countries' anti-dumping actions	299
14.4.2	Developing countries' anti-dumping actions	300
14.5	Conclusion	301
15	Labour Standards	303
15.1	Background	303
15.1.1	Why is this an issue now?	304

15.2	The economics and politics of linking labour standards and trade	306
15.2.1	Unfair advantage	306
15.2.2	Race to the bottom	307
15.2.3	Moral arguments	307
15.2.4	Legitimacy	309
15.2.5	Enforcement mechanisms	309
15.3	Existing approaches to labour standards	310
15.4	Current negotiating positions on trade and labour standards	311
15.5	Labour standards and poverty	312
15.5.1	Standards can be pro-poor	312
15.5.2	The link between labour standards and trade	313
15.5.3	How labour standards and trade liberalization influence one another	313
15.5.4	Domestic policy is the key	314
15.5.5	Policies on child labour and poverty	314
15.6	Conclusion	317
16	Environmental Standards	319
16.1	Background	320
16.2	The economics of trade and environmental standards	321
16.2.1	Unfair advantage	321
16.2.2	The polluter pays principle	323
16.2.3	Race to the bottom	323
16.2.4	Moral arguments	324
16.2.5	The precautionary principle	324
16.2.6	Legitimacy	325
16.2.7	Enforcement mechanisms	325
16.2.8	International spillovers	326
16.3	Environmental standards in the WTO Agreements	326
16.4	Multilateral environmental agreements	326
16.5	The current status of negotiations	328
16.6	Environmental standards, trade and poverty	330
16.6.1	The poor are more vulnerable	330
16.6.2	Trade policy and the environment	331
16.6.3	Alternatives to trade sanctions	333
16.7	Conclusion	334
17	Competition Policy	336
17.1	Background	336
17.1.1	Why is this an issue now?	337
17.2	The trade-offs in competition policy	339
17.3	Progress on multilateral approaches to competition policies	342
17.3.1	Competition aspects of the WTO Agreements	342
17.3.2	EU and US differences	344
17.3.3	Developing countries	346

17.3.4	Prospects	346
17.4	Competition policy and poverty	347
17.4.1	Encouraging domestic competition	347
17.4.2	Developed country export cartels and multinationals	347
17.4.3	Industrial policy	349
17.4.4	Institutions	350
17.5	Conclusion	351
18	Investment and Trade Related Investment Measures (TRIMs)	354
18.1	Background	354
18.2	The economics of TRIMs	356
18.2.1	TRIMs as correctives to market failures	357
18.3	The current status of TRIMs	359
18.3.1	The legacy of the Uruguay Round	359
18.3.2	Unilateral policy	360
18.3.3	An investment agreement?	361
18.4	TRIMs and poverty	362
18.5	Conclusion	363
	Glossary	365
	Bibliography	381